Figure 1: In this state-of-the-art report, we evaluate current research papers on interactive volume visualization. Nowadays, volume visualization is primarily data-driven, and how the various methods, frameworks, and tools cope with that data largely depends on the topology. This figure shows the structure we follow in this paper. We focus on different data representations (center). For each of them, we discuss different approaches of large-scale visualization (blue captions) and the different techniques used to implement them (black captions).

Abstract

Volume data these days is usually massive in terms of its topology, multiple fields, or temporal component. With the gap between compute and memory performance widening, the memory subsystem becomes the primary bottleneck for scientific volume visualization. Single, structured, regular representations are often infeasible because the buses and interconnects involved need to accommodate the data required for interactive rendering. In this state-of-the-art report, we review works focusing on large-scale volume rendering beyond those typical structured and regular grid representations. We focus primarily on hierarchical and adaptive mesh refinement representations, unstructured meshes, and compressed representations that gained recent popularity. We review works that approach this kind of data using strategies such as out-of-core rendering, massive parallelism, and other strategies to cope with the sheer size of the ever-increasing volume of data produced by today's supercomputers and acquisition devices. We emphasize the data management side of large-scale volume rendering systems and also include a review of tools that support the various volume data types discussed.
