Fluid x Solid: 29 experimental architecture projects Dana Krystle ,2025-01-10 In my search for a more concept oriented fluid architecture design approach I found myself breaking free from every single constraint set to us by architecture school The design boundaries now that I think of it are mostly imaginary and for some reason had a huge chokehold on me I kept noticing how I always felt like I couldn't do this or I couldn't do that when it came to design Don't get me wrong I'm not anti functionalism but I believe that we as architects artists designers should act more intuitively and design more freely to create wonders from our imagination Everything in architecture around these days is painfully rigid and devoid of beauty and aesthetics we no longer feel peace because we feel empty just like these spaces I used to look at old Renaissance and Baroque architecture and think to myself Too much ornament too much unnecessary waste of materials Being heavily trained as a modernist architect following Le Corbusier Richard Meier and their likes I have to admit I find myself to be completely brainwashed I am against everything they taught us about beauty in architecture school This only happened after I traveled to Europe and Asia for the past years I noticed how full of spirit these so called over ornamented designs were I want the soul back in new buildings I think we all want it deep down in fact I think we should demand beauty we should demand more innovation Why insist on living in buildings that feel like machines Why should we trap ourselves into thinking modernity means stripping down everything that makes us human Sculpture painting classical art and heritage design these are what make life worthy of living We are humans and we love beauty naturally we search for it like we search for water and warmth

These so called dead buildings are killing our souls slowly and surely we were not meant to live in a heartless soulless place I want to live surrounded by beauty and innovation and my response is to break free from every single constraint set on me by architecture school I object to modern architecture I object to soulless designs I object to glass panels and aluminum cladding We were so programmed to think and feel like machines I demand beauty back These volumes are my manifestos for breaking free from the mold for believing that sculpture beauty and art are human rights that were stolen from us that we deserve a more beautiful place to live in that we deserve to be and feel like we are human again In this book and hopefully many more volumes to come I experiment with form creating something out of my imagination something I feel like we as humans and especially designers should try hard to achieve more organic fluid and free of constraints sculpture like forms that can be a part of this arid landscape we suddenly found our cities being swallowed into bridges , Departments of Transportation, and Housing and Urban Development, and Related Agencies Appropriations for 2015 United States.
