Taking the High Road Bruce Katz, Robert Puentes, 2006-05-25 Since the early 1990s federal transportation laws have slowly started to level the playing field between highway and alternative transportation strategies as well as between older and newer communities The Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 and the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century made substantial changes in transportation practices These laws devolved greater responsibility for planning and implementation to urban development organizations and introduced more flexibility in the spending of federal highway and transit funds They also created a series of special programs to carry out important national objectives and they tightened the linkages between transportation spending and issues such as metropolitan air quality Taking the High Road examines the most pressing transportation challenges facing American cities suburbs and metropolitan areas The authors focus on the central issues in the ongoing debate and deliberations about the nation s transportation policy They go beyond the federal debate however to lay out an agenda for reform that responds directly to those responsible for putting these policies into practice leaders at the state metropolitan and local levels This book presents public officials with options for reform Hoping to build upon the progress and momentum of earlier transportation laws it ensures a better understanding of the problems and provides policymakers journalists and the public with a comprehensive guide to the numerous issues that must be addressed Topics include A wide ranging policy framework that addresses the reauthorization debate An examination of transportation finance and how it affects cities and suburbs An analysis of metropolitan decisionmaking in transportation The challenges of transportation access for working families and the elderly The problems of increasing traffic congestion and the lack of adequate alternatives Contributors include Scot role emotions play in changes such as global expansion job eliminations leadership changes as well as stressors of day to day responsibilities the EI of managers and how they manage their associates is an element that leadership needs to consider while moving their organizations forward Organizations everywhere need now to realize the benefits of primal leadership by cultivating leaders who generate the emotional resonance that lets people flourish Andy Clark and His Critics Matteo Colombo,Elizabeth Irvine,Mog Stapleton,2019 Presentaci n del editor Andy Clark is a leading philosopher and cognitive scientist The fruits of his work have been diverse and lasting They have had an extraordinary impact throughout philosophy psychology neuroscience and robotics The extended mind hypothesis the power of parallel distributed processing the role of language in opening up novel paths for thinking the flexible interface between biological minds and artificial technologies the significance of representation in explanations of intelligent behaviour the promise of the predictive processing framework to unify the cognitive sciences these are just some of the ideas explored in Clark s work that have been picked up by many researchers and that have been contributing to intense debate across the sciences of mind and brain This volume provides the first interdisciplinary critical engagement with Clark s work it includes contributions of authors from several disciplines offering a fresh perspective on key questions in the sciences of mind and brain The History of the County of Derby: Drawn Up from Actual Observation, and from the Best Authorities Stephen Glover,1829 Quantum Learning & Instructional Leadership in Practice John Parks Le Tellier,2006-10-27 Using evidence based strategies this inspiring handbook provides principals and teachers with a catalog of practiced moves or actions that upgrade performance create durable motivation and renew energy levels History of the French Revolution: Campaign of Champagne. next twenty five years As a result direct care workers such as home care aides and certified nursing assistants CNAs will become essential to many more families Yet these workers tend to be low paid poorly trained and receive little respect Is such a workforce capable of addressing the needs of our aging population In Who Will Care for Us economist Paul Osterman assesses the challenges facing the long term care industry He presents an innovative policy agenda that reconceives direct care workers work roles and would improve both the quality of their jobs and the quality of elder care Using national surveys administrative data and nearly 120 original interviews with workers employers advocates and policymakers Osterman finds that direct care workers are marginalized and often invisible in the health care system While doctors and families alike agree that good home care aides and CNAs are crucial to the well being of their patients the workers report poverty level wages erratic schedules exclusion from care teams and frequent incidences of physical injury on the job Direct care workers are also highly constrained by policies that specify what they are allowed to do on the job and in some states are even prevented from simple tasks such as administering eye drops Osterman concludes that broadening the scope of care workers duties will simultaneously boost the quality of care for patients and lead to better jobs and higher wages He proposes integrating home care aides and CNAs into larger medical teams and training them as health coaches who educate patients on concerns such as managing chronic conditions and transitioning out of hospitals Osterman shows that restructuring direct care workers jobs and providing the appropriate training could lower health spending in the long term by reducing unnecessary emergency room and hospital visits limiting the use of nursing homes and lowering the rate of turnover among care workers As the Baby Boom generation ages Who Will Care for Us demonstrates the importance of restructuring the long term care industry and establishing a new relationship between direct care workers patients and the medical system Oliver and Boyd's New Edinburgh Almanac and National Repository ,1857
