Struggle For Land And The Fate Of The Forests:

The Struggle for Land and the Fate of the Forests Marcus Colchester, Larry Lohmann, 1993 The tropical forests are vanishing faster than ever At one international conference after another politicians and planners wring their hands at the world's approaching doom Deforestation they tell us is caused by poverty over population and under development The solutions are therefore obvious fewer people and more development This book challenged these assumptions Deforestation it argues is an expression of structural inequalities within tropical countries in their relations with the industrial North Throwing air money into the development pot will only accelerate forest loss if these structural issues are not simultaneously addressed Based on six country studies from Latin America Asia and Africa to illustrate the real complexity of the problem and the diversity of situations that exist this book shows how land concentration land speculation and landlessness are the main causes of improvident land use Poor people denied land and livelihood are being forced into the forests in ever increasing numbers for sheer survival often encouraged by government and development agency funding Meanwhile the lands they have been forced to abandon are turned over to agribusiness producing cash crops for export Agrarian reform must be moved to the top of the global agenda Without land and food security rural communities will become increasingly destabilised and impoverished and vulnerable ecosystems will be destroyed Local people must be allowed to regain control over their land and their economies and Third World debt cancelled if the twin problems of poverty and environmental destruction are to be tackled

Forest Politics David Humphreys, 1996 First Published in 2009 Routledge is an imprint of Taylor Francis an informa company , Environmental Challenges in South-East Asia Victor T. King, 2013-01-11 This volume discusses environmental change natural resource exploitation and the prospect for ecological sustainability in Southeast Asia The contributors including sociologists geographers anthropologists economists political economists and historians presents the findings of recent archival and field research mainly from ongoing programmes of team research based in European universities and institutes Among the themes discussed are European and indigenous perceptions of the environment historical processes of environmental change the politics of resource use ecotourism and development deforestation and smallholding land use strategies migration and environmental degradation disease environment and human geography demography sustainability and resource exploitation

Security, the Environment and Emancipation Matt McDonald, 2012-01-30 This book offers an examination of the role of emancipation in the study and practice of security focusing on the issue of environmental change The end of the Cold War created a context in which traditional approaches to security could be systematically questioned This period also saw a concerted attempt in IR to argue that environmental change constituted a threat to security This book argues that such a notion is problematic as it suggests that a universal definition of security is possible which prevents a recognition of security as a site of contestation in which a range of actors articulate alternative visions of who or what is in need of being secured If security is understood and approached in traditional terms as the territorial preservation of the nation state from external threat then it is indeed difficult to see how environmental issues would benefit from being placed on states security agenda If however security is defined in terms of the emancipation of the most vulnerable individuals from contingent structural oppressions then drawing a relationship between environmental change and security may be beneficial for redressing those environmental issues and prioritising the needs of those most at risk from the manifestations of global environmental change This book takes the limitations of contemporary approaches to the relationship between the environment and security as its starting point and seeks to do two things First it aims to illustrate the ways in which arguments over approaches to environmental issues can be viewed as contestation over the meaning of security in particular political contexts Central here is the composition and assumptions of the dominant security discourse to emerge regarding those issues a framework of meaning for the most important forms of action on behalf of a particular group defining the terms for meaningful contestation and negotiation about security itself within that group As such the book attempts to illustrate the dynamics of competition over the meaning of security with reference to environmental issues particularly focusing on instances of political change in the dominant security discourse through which that issue is approached In the process the author points to the central role of these dominant security discourses in underpinning the most practically significant actions regarding environmental issues such as deforestation and global climate change The book employs methodological tools that enable a focus on how particular frameworks of meaning are constituted and become dominant how they provide a lens through which various issues are approached and how discourses most consistent with redressing environmental change and the suffering of the most vulnerable might come to provide the framework through which security is viewed in particular contexts This book will be of much interest to students of Critical Security Studies geography sociology IR and Political Science in general

Land Rights and Minorities Roger Plant, 1994-07-01 LAND A QUESTION OF SURVIVAL The process of territorial seizure and loss began centuries ago and continues today Foreign occupation colonisation resettlement nationalisation large scale infrastructural development and wider economic forces have undermined and in some cases obliterated the land security of the world's vulnerable minorities Land is now a key issue in minority claims for protection While some minorities seek restoration of lands lost in the past others struggle to avert future dispossession or demand equality of rights with dominant majorities LAND RIGHTS AND MINORITIES written by the specialist author and consultant Roger Plant addresses the current predicament of the world's minorities with regard to access to and use of land and other natural resources It emphasises the law and policy framework for the recognition of minority land rights and the available procedures through which minorities may formulate their claims Drawing on examples from Africa the Americas Asia Australasia Europe and the Middle East the report demonstrates that the legacy of past discrimination must be addressed through affirmative action and that newly evolving policies should take into account the security of currently or potentially disadvantaged groups Some minorities are in danger of imminent extinction others pursue their demands with vigour Accepting the global imperative of environmentally sustainable land use and management this authoritative Minority Rights Group report shows how vulnerable minorities will require a range of strategies and responses to ensure their territorial security and ultimately their survival Please note that the terminology in the fields of minority rights and indigenous peoples rights has changed over time MRG strives to reflect these changes as well as respect the right to self identification on the part of minorities and indigenous peoples At the same time after over 50 years work we know that our archive is of considerable interest to activists and researchers Therefore we make available as much of our back catalogue as possible while being aware that the language used may not reflect current thinking on these issues

Contested Lands in Southern and Eastern Africa Robin H. Palmer,1997 Questions of land tenure and land reform and their impact on poor and vulnerable communities are of vital importance throughout Southern and Eastern Africa From the vast literature on the subject Robin Palmer has selected and summarized more than 300 recent books articles academic theses and reports of conferences and workshops This survey includes studies of Angola Botswana Kenya Lesotho Malawi Mozambique Namibia Rwanda South Africa Swaziland Tanzania Uganda Zambia and Zimbabwe In addition to major sections on economic and legal issues special sections feature studies of Land and Pastoralism and Land and Women

Globalisation, Poverty and Conflict Max Spoor,2005-12-29 Is development pass Is it merely a by product or a trickle down effect of economic growth spurred by globalisation Will poverty simply diminish with increased global markets This state of the art critical development reader deals with these and related questions Globalisation Poverty and Conflict examines the inter relationships between globalisation poverty and conflict It complements current debates in the field of development studies and in an era in which development fatigue seems to have become more profound than ever before it brings the importance of development once again to the forefront Achieving the Millennium Development Goals by 2015 is a concrete target which many governments have agreed to work towards Whether these goals can be realised is another issue Nonetheless the Millennium Development Goals have brought more focused attention to development in the past few years and renewed debate about the relationships between the process of globalisation and widespread poverty and the emergence of violent conflicts The authors in this edited volume discuss these inter related and highly controversial topical elements of development in a number of chapters organised around three sets of issues 1 globalisation inequality and poverty 2 governance civil society and poverty and 3 resource degradation institutions and conflict The contributions represent current thinking on and practice of development policy poverty reduction the need for multi level democratic institutions and the containing and prevention of conflicts The authors confront the predominant mainstream ideas on development and propose alternatives The chapters written by a select group of scholars and development practitioners will be of direct interest to those involved in this field of social sciences and in development practice but they are composed in such a way as to remain accessible for the generallyinterested reader

Deforestation and Reforestation in Namibia Emmanuel Kreike,2009-10-26

Descriptions of the late 1800s landscape in the Ovambo floodplain in north central Namibia closely match the area's late 1900s appearance suggesting that little change occurred between the pre colonial baseline and the postcolonial outcome Yet paradoxically colonial conquest population pressure biological invasions new technology and economic globalization caused both dramatic deforestation and reforestation in less than a century The paradox stems from the fact that the prevailing global environmental models obscure and homogenize the process of environmental change different and contradictory interpretations are dismissed as alternative readings or misreadings of the same process Deforestation and Reforestation however argues that the paradox highlights the need to reframe environmental change as plural processes occurring along multiple trajectories that may be dissynchronized and asymmetrical Ecological Relations Susan Board, 2003-08-29

International relations IR traditionally theorises the social relationships between different peoples In so doing it ignores the ecological bases to life the ground upon which we walk the all encompassing bind of nature In the current climate of environmental degradation international relations as a theory must in turn be altered By broadening the term relations to include this ecological framework international relations can be approached from a changed perspective In this book Susan Board uses a Foucauldian model of power to expand the boundaries of international relations She argues that relations can include other people or animals and are not exclusively between states Such a perspective acts to denaturalise the marginalization of women animals and indigenous peoples and hence expand the constrained discipline of IR By rethinking international relations to put ecological foundations first we are pushed to think and act with consideration of the long term sustainability of the global environment an ecological focus reminds us of our interdependence with our environment and all our neighbours The book raises conceptual and methodological issues that go directly to the heart of current critical engagements within the discipline of IR As such it will be of great interest to students and researchers in IR environmental politics and political theory
