includes new material reflecting current advances in such topics as salience cline for discourse rhetorical relations paragraph structures transitivity ergativity agency hierarchy and word order typologies

J. O'Connell, Shang-Jin Wei, 1997 Recent empirical work has made headway in exploring the non linear dynamics of deviations from the law of one price and purchasing power parity that are apt to arise from transaction costs However there are two important facets of this work that need improvement First the choice of empirical specification is arbitrary Second the data used are typically composite price indices which are subject to potentially serious aggregation biases This paper examines the evidence for transport cost induced nonlinear price behavior within the U S We address both of the above shortcomings First we use a simple continuous time model to inform the choice of empirical specification The model indicates that the behavior of deviations from price parity depends on the relative importance of fixed and variable transport costs Second we employ data on disaggregated commodity prices yielding a pure measure of the deviations from price parity We find strong evidence of nonlinear reversion in these deviations The nature of this reversion suggests that fixed costs of transportation are integral to an understanding of law of one price deviations
