Personal Relationships and Social Support Steve Duck, Roxane Cohen Silver, 1990 It is widely acknowledged that the support given by friends intimates and other members of a social network is important to a person's well-being Until recently however little attention has been paid to the relational processes and contexts through which social support is mediated Personal Relationships and Social Support represents a major initiative in its focus upon social support as a phenomenon embedded in the everyday transactions and dynamics of people's interpersonal relationships The authors consider such issues as the importance of the day to day talk of social support within interpersonal relationships the strategies that people use to mobilize support within particular relational contexts and the impact of people's daily life and work patterns on the need for and ability to mobilize support The effect in turn of competence in support giving on the development and maintenance of interpersonal relationships is examined as are the possible negative consequences of particular kinds of support Personal Relationships and Social Support brings together for the first time two strands of work on social support and the nature of interpersonal relationships which have tended to develop in isolation from each other This path breaking book will be essential reading for all those interested in new developments in theory and research in the field of human relationships

The Health and Social Needs of Young Adults with Physical Disabilities Andrew Thomas, Martin Bax, Diane Smyth, 1989 This book addresses a topic that has received surprisingly little attention to date the health and social needs of young adults with physical disabilities Following an extensive review of the contemporary literature on the subject the authors report an in depth study on a large sample of physically disabled 18 to 25 year olds living in two survey areas one urban and one semirural The study which included pediatric examinations and interviews by a social psychologist found that a large proportion of subjects face social and medical problems for instance They have serious health needs that are not being met by the statutory services they left school with less than adequate skills to enable them to lead an independent adult life they are without a daytime occupation or attend day centers that are described as unstimulating places they do not receive all the financial benefits to which they are entitled they are isolated from their peers and lack the social skills to interact with others in a positive and successful way Parents and guardians were also found to receive little physical or emotional support These findings underline the need for a better system of providing and coordinating services for this client group and the authors call for the formation within each local health authority area of an Adult Disability Service that would have a clinical and planning role in terms of health care and that would act as a linchpin in the coordination of health educational social and voluntary services Although this work relates specifically to service provision in the United Kingdom it is felt that the conclusions and recommendations are also broadly applicable to the situation in other countries
