

SOCIAL IDENTITY THEORY

Social Identity theory explains how people develop their identities. Its main argument is that people develop their identity through interaction with society.

KEY CONCEPTS

Tajfel and Turner proposed that an individual's identity, or sense of the self is influenced both through:

1. Interpersonal Interaction – One-to-one interactions with other individuals
2. Intergroup Interaction – Identification with a large grouping of people, and the interaction of their grouping in turn with other groups.

EXAMPLES

We can see examples of social identity theory in nationalism, religion, race and ethnicity, and fraternities and sororities.

By studying these social groups, we can see how people use in-groups and out-groups to develop their social identities.

Hong Kong's New Identity Politics lam-chong Ip, 2019-11-28 Ip uses Hong Kong as a case study in how the production of the desire for the local lies at the heart of global cultural economy Perhaps more so than most places the construction of a local identity in Hong Kong has come about through a complex interplay of neoliberalism postcoloniality and reaction to the consequent anxieties and uncertainties As its importance as an economic centre has diminished and its relationship with Mainland China has become more strained its people have become more concerned to define a Hong Kong identity that can be defended from external threat Ip analyses the working and reworking of power relations and modes of agency in this global city A must read for scholars of Hong Kong politics and society as well as a fascinating case study for scholars of identity politics as a global phenomenon
