The Biological Foundations of Socialism

As the political climate in the US progresses towards the 2020 election the question of socialism is ever more prevalent. Despite all the talk about freedom, the American people have never had the opportunity to choose between socialism and capitalism, not unlike countries with a single party, like say China, where there may be elections, but their citizens do not have plurality of choices of parties and candidates. In a similar way, the US citizens have never had any the opportunity to choose something other than capitalism. In the US past elections there has never been plurality or diversity of choices in terms of the economic system from which citizen may choose. In 2016 the one candidate that mentioned the word socialism was blacklisted and all the powers that be did what they needed to do to prevent him from being the Democratic nominee, and thus prevented the American people from having that choice.

The debate about socialism or capitalism, or some other third way, is rich and complex and there is little chance it will get a good revision and scrutiny in the US mainstream media. Even when the debate between is properly addressed, the debate focuses on economic, social and political issues. While these are necessary points of the discussion, I think the issues pertaining human nature have been ignored, or mis interpreted. Is there an economic system that best fits human nature? Or the opposite question: Is there an economic model that is incompatible with the very essence of humankind? What does our knowledge of the human species and other socio-biological systems tell us which system is more appropriate, if any? Perhaps there is no absolute answer to these questions, but these issues are highly relevant if we want to build a new political and economic system that does not bring conflict with human nature. While the decision of what system we live under is ultimately a sovereign decision of humankind it will be helpful to understand better our instinctive tendencies.

Some positions have argued that socialism is incompatible with human nature because of the inherent selfishness of our species but the issue has not been responsibly analyzed under current evolutionary theory. Often competition is presented as the only rule dictating natural selection, when in actuality evolutionary systems are far more complex. In this essay I explore what Capitalism and Socialism mean and try to reconcile both concepts with our current understanding of human nature under the light of current
