ABSTRACT. Marriage, as defined by Law No.1/1974, is an inner and outer relationship between a man and a woman with the goal of building a joyful and eternal family (home) based on the One Godhead. However, there are various social phenomena that occur in the society with specific goals that are structured in a marriage process known as mut'ah marriage or contract marriage. In this study, the author attempts to evaluate mut'ah marriage from a sociological standpoint using a social definition paradigm and the perspective of symbolic interactionism, specifically negotiated orders. This research is a library research. As a result, actors face a variety of incentives ranging from the economic to the social which can then cause damage at the stage of the basis of action to the stage of consumption or action. Two forms of negotiation were also found to justify mut'ah marriage, namely the negotiation of the rational dimension and the negotiation of the economic dimension

KEYWORDS: mut'ah marriage, negotiated order, symbolic interactionism, marriage.

INTRODUCTION

Marriage is a way to open the door of sustenance, because in marriage there is the glory of getting offspring and opening the cord of friendship between the two families so that it can open many doors of help. In addition to opening the door of sustenance, marriage is an institution that can create social order and can become the foundation of social life. With the institution of marriage, basic human needs both physically and mentally can be fulfilled.

Marriage in Islam is the only relationship between a man and a woman that is justified, resulting in a harmony known as family. Such sharia can eliminate the anxiety of men and women to avoid adultery, and turn it into a peace in fostering domestic dynamics. The definition of marriage in positive law has been regulated in Law No.1/1974 concerning Marriage, namely that marriage is an inner and outer bond between a man and a woman as husband and wife with the aim of forming a happy and eternal family (household) based on God, The Almighty¹.

In addition to the definition provided by Law no. 1 of 1974, the Compilation of Islamic Law in Indonesia also provides another definition that does not reduce some of the meaning of the definition of the law but is to add to the explanation with the formulation of article 2 chapter II of the KHI, namely "Marriage according to Islamic law is marriage, namely a very strong contract or mitsaqan ghalizhan to obey Allah's commands, and doing it is worship."²

But on the other hand, marriage institutions are defined in various ways by some people. One of the social phenomena that occurs in society is the existence of temporary or temporary marriages. Such marriages are popularly referred to as contract marriages or mut'ah marriages. Mut'ah comes from the word mata'a yamta'u mat'an, which means enjoyment or pleasure, which is something that is enjoyed or given to be enjoyed. Mutah marriage is also called temporary marriage (mu'aaqat) or interrupted marriage (munqati') which is a marriage contract that is limited to a certain time, because the man who marries the woman is only one day, or one week or one month and so on. ³The practice of mutah

Changing Urban Education Clarence Nathan Stone, 1998 With critical issues like desegregation and funding facing our schools dissatisfaction with public education has reached a new high Teachers decry inadequate resources while critics claim educators are more concerned with job security than effective teaching Though urban education has reached crisis proportions contending players have difficulty agreeing on a common program of action This book tells why Changing Urban Education confronts the prevailing naivete in school reform by examining the factors that shape reinforce or undermine reform efforts Edited by one of the nation s leading urban scholars it examines forces for change and resistance in urban education and proposes that the barrier to reform can only be overcome by understanding how schools fit into the broader political contexts of their cities Much of the problem with our schools lies with the reluctance of educators to recognize the profoundly political character of public education The contributors show how urban political contexts vary widely with factors like racial composition the role of the teachers union and relations between cities and surrounding metropolitan areas

Presenting case studies of original field research in Baltimore Chicago Houston and six other urban areas they consider how resistance to desegregation and the concentration of the poor in central urban areas affect education and they suggest how cities can build support for reform through the involvement of business and other community players By demonstrating the complex interrelationship between urban education and politics this book shows schools to be not just places for educating children but also major employers and large spenders of tax dollars It also introduces the concept of civic capacity the ability of educators and non educators to work together on common goals and suggests that this key issue must be addressed before education can be improved Changing Urban Education makes it clear to educators that the outcome of reform efforts depends heavily on their political context as it reminds political scientists that education is a major part of the urban mix While its prognosis is not entirely optimistic it sets forth important guidelines that cannot be ignored if our schools are to successfully prepare children for the future

The Social World of the Comprehensive School Glenn Turner, 2019-08-13 A comprehensive school like any community is split into many groups and sub divisions and contains many different social worlds within its structure First published in 1983 this work is based on a one year project carried out by the author which involved observation of pupils in lessons and interviews and informal conversations

Sociology and the School Peter Woods, 2012 This is an introduction to interactionist work in education during the 1970s and 80s The interactionist viewpoint concentrates on how people construct meanings in the ebb and flow of everyday life what they think and do how they react to one another and has in recent years established itself as one of the leading approaches in education It has generated illuminating research studies which by being firmly based in the real world of teaching and dealing with the fine grained details of school life have helped to break down the barriers between teacher and researcher This volume presents the results of this valuable work within a coherent theoretical framework by focusing on the major interactionist concepts of situation perspectives cultures strategies negotiation and careers By bringing them together in this way the author demonstrates their collective potential for the deeper understanding of school life and the possibilities for sociological theory His book therefore offers both a summary of and a reflection on achievement in the area of interactionism as it relates to schools
