Extended Abstract

Belief dynamics are central to human society. Individuals depend on accurate beliefs to engage in appropriate behaviors (Hemmer et al., 2022; Yon et al., 2020), such as deciding which college or which job position to apply for. Additionally, beliefs are inherently social — successful coordination and cooperation are founded on shared beliefs, and people form groups based on deep-seated beliefs (Van Prooijen & Douglas, 2018; White et al., 2021). However, beliefs were traditionally often studied in isolation; psychological studies typically focused on a single belief of independent individuals. However, this approach is increasingly challenged. On the one hand, the network perspective of individual belief systems suggests that beliefs should be considered interconnected systems – a change in one belief is constrained by surrounding beliefs and leads to changes in other beliefs (Brandt, 2022; Dalege et al., 2016; Powell et al., 2023). On the other hand, a social network approach suggests groups can be viewed as a social network of beliefs held by individuals (Lüders et al., 2024; Sirbu et al., 2017). Therefore, it is proposed that belief dynamics should increasingly be understood as a “network within a network,” where the within-person belief network is embedded within between-person social networks (Galesic et al., 2021; Vlasceanu et al., 2023).

A fundamental force driving belief dynamics is the human endeavor to resolve inconsistencies within both individual and social networks (Dalege et al., 2016; Galesic et al., 2021). This concept is supported by classic psychological theories, such as cognitive dissonance (Festinger, 1957) and Heider’s balance theory (Heider, 1958). However, the nature of the trade-offs between internal dissonance and social imbalance remains unclear. Existing models often presume that individuals have a fixed preference for resolving internal dissonance over addressing social imbalance (Galesic et al., 2021), but the validity of this assumption is debatable. In reality, individuals may navigate these inconsistencies in a more dynamic and context-dependent manner. Humans are capable of synthesizing advice and personal experience, typically leaning towards more reliable sources (Biele et al., 2009; Vélez & Gweon, 2019). For instance, if an individual encounters conflicting beliefs about a particular issue but the social consensus on that issue is clear, they may choose to align with the social norm. Conversely, if the social consensus

Religion in Rebellions, Revolutions, and Social Movements Warren S. Goldstein, Jean-Pierre Reed, 2022-05-19 Religion in Rebellions Revolutions and Social Movements demonstrates that while religion is often a social force that maintains if not legitimates the sociopolitical order it is also a decisive factor in economic social and political conflict The book explores how and under what conditions religion functions as a progressive and or reactionary force that compels people to challenge or protect social orders The authors focus on the role that religion has played in peasant slave and plebeian rebellions revolutions including the Chinese English French Russian and Iranian and modern social movements In addition to these case studies the book also contains theoretical chapters that explore the relationship religious thought has with the politics of liberation and oppression It examines the institutional organizational ritualistic discursive ideological and or framing mechanisms that give religion its oppressive and liberating structures Many scholars of religion continue very conventional modes of thinking ignoring how religion has been and continues to be both a hegemonic and counterhegemonic force in conflict This book looks at both sides of the equation This international and interdisciplinary volume will be of interest to students and scholars in the fields of politics of religion sociology of religion religious studies gender studies and history

Monins Johnson, 1908 Religion and the Decline of Fertility in the Western World Renzo Derosas, Frans van Poppel, 2006-10-05 1 RELIGION AND THE DECLINE OF FERTILITY IN THE NINETEENTH AND TWENTIETH CENTURIES THE EMERGENCE OF A RESEARCH ISSUE During the last quarter of the nineteenth century almost all European countries began to experience a decline in their fertility level This transition was recognized as crucial almost from its inception and provided a strong stimulus for the scientific study of fertility until then there had been no apparent trend toward a decline in fertility with the exception of France and differentials in fertility had not been very conspicuous Lorimer 1959 142

Handbooks and articles on population mainly of a statistical demographic nature took up the question of falling birth rates and its causes The bases for these studies were the routinely collected population statistics that made it possible to observe fertility trends for administrative regions By identifying administrative regions that differed in the timing and extent of the fertility decline researchers hoped to find explanations for the fertility transition Municipal statistical offices in larger cities such as Berlin Vienna Budapest and Amsterdam were able to obtain more diversified data than were generally collected by national agencies and offered social scientists the opportunity to carry out more intensive investigations of differential fertility that is of variations in fertility of socially defined subpopulations or categories defined by occupation or rural urban residence Somewhat later the national statistical agencies started to collect and publish comparable data at the national level
