

There are a number of other factors that may influence the results of the study. For example, the study was conducted in a single country, which may limit the generalizability of the findings. Additionally, the study was a cross-sectional design, which means that the data were collected at a single point in time. This may limit the ability to establish causality between the variables. Finally, the study was a self-report study, which means that the data were collected from the participants themselves. This may introduce bias into the results.
