Taras Bulba And Other Tales:

Taras Bulba and Other Tales Nikolai Vasilievich Gogol, 2020-09-28 Russian literature so full of enigmas contains no greater creative mystery than Nikolai Vasil evich Gogol 1809 1852 who has done for the Russian novel and Russian prose what Pushkin has done for Russian poetry Before these two men came Russian literature can hardly have been said to exist It was pompous and effete with pseudo classicism foreign influences were strong in the speech of the upper circles there was an over fondness for German French and English words Between them the two friends by force of their great genius cleared away the debris which made for sterility and erected in their stead a new structure out of living Russian words The spoken word born of the people gave soul and wing to literature only by coming to earth the native earth was it enabled to soar Coming up from Little Russia the Ukraine with Cossack blood in his veins Gogol injected his own healthy virus into an effete body blew his own virile spirit the spirit of his race into its nostrils and gave the Russian novel its direction to this very day More than that The nomad and romantic in him troubled and restless with Ukrainian myth legend and song impressed upon Russian literature faced with the realities of modern life a spirit titanic and in clash with its material and produced in the mastery of this every day material commonly called sordid a phantasmagoria intense with beauty A clue to all Russian realism may be found in a Russian critic's observation about Gogol Seldom has nature created a man so romantic in bent yet so masterly in portraying all that is unromantic in life But this statement does not cover the whole ground for it is easy to see in almost all of Gogol's work his free Cossack soul trying to break through the shell of sordid to day like some ancient demon essentially Dionysian So that his works true though they are to our life are at once a reproach a protest and a challenge ever calling for joy ancient joy that is no more with us And they have all the joy and sadness of the Ukrainian songs he loved so much Ukrainian was to Gogol the language of the soul and it was in Ukrainian songs rather than in old chronicles of which he was not a little contemptuous that he read the history of his people Time and again in his essays and in his letters to friends he expresses his boundless joy in these songs O songs you are my joy and my life How I love you What are the bloodless chronicles I pore over beside those clear live chronicles I cannot live without songs they reveal everything more and more clearly oh how clearly gone by life and gone by men The songs of Little Russia are her everything her poetry her history and her ancestral grave He who has not penetrated them deeply knows nothing of the past of this blooming region of Russia

(With an introduction by John Cournos.).* Nikolai Vasil'evich Gogol',John CURNOS,1917 Taras Bulba and Other Tales - The Original Classic Edition Nikolai Vasilievich Gogol,2012-06 Finally available a high quality book of the original classic edition of Taras Bulba and Other Tales This is a new and freshly published edition of this culturally important work by Nikolai Vasilievich Gogol which is now at last again available to you Enjoy this classic work today These selected paragraphs distill the contents and give you a quick look inside Taras Bulba and Other Tales The fugitive from Poland the fugitive from the Tatar and the Turk homeless with nothing to lose their lives ever exposed to danger forsook their peaceful occupations and became transformed into a warlike people known as the Cossacks whose appearance towards the end of the thirteenth century or at the beginning of the fourteenth was a remarkable event which possibly alone suggests Gogol prevented any further inroads by the two Mohammedan nations into Europe All of Ukraine took on its colour from the Cossack and if I have drawn largely on Gogol's own account of the origins of this race it was because it seemed to me that Gogol's emphasis on the heroic rather than on the historical Gogol is generally discounted as an historian would give the reader a proper approach to the mood in which he created Taras Bulba the finest epic in Russian literature I have already told in my introduction to Dead Souls 1 how Gogol created his great realistic masterpiece which was to influence Russian literature for generations to come under the influence of models so remote in time or place as Don Quixote or Pickwick Papers and how this combination of influences joined to his own genius produced a work quite new and original in effect and only remotely reminiscent of the models which have inspired it But most of all he dwells on its heroic qualities inseparable to him from what is religious in the Odyssey and says Gogol this book contains the idea that a human being wherever he might be whatever pursuit he might follow is threatened by many woes that he must need wrestle with them for that very purpose was life given to him that never for a single instant must he despair just as Odysseus did not despair who in every hard and oppressive moment turned to his own heart unaware that with this inner scrutiny of himself he had already said that hidden prayer uttered in a moment of distress by every man having no understanding whatever of God He was one of those characters which could only exist in that fierce fifteenth century and in that half nomadic corner of Europe when the whole of Southern Russia deserted by its princes was laid waste and burned to the quick by pitiless troops of Mongolian robbers when men deprived of house and home grew brave there when amid conflagrations threatening neighbours and eternal terrors they settled down and growing accustomed to looking these things straight in the face trained themselves not to know that there was such a thing as fear in the world when the old peaceable Slav spirit was fired with warlike flame and the Cossack state was instituted a free wild outbreak of Russian nature and when all the river banks fords and like suitable places were peopled by Cossacks whose number no man knew Taras Bulba and Other Tales Vasilievich G Nikolai Vasilievich Gogol,2008-01 Gogol was a Ukrainian writer from the early 19th century Taras Bulba is the story of the life of the Ukrainian Cossacks who lived during the 16th century Taras Bulba is an old warrior who takes his sons on a training mission He becomes their leader and lays siege on the Catholic Poles When they are about to attack a walled city his son discovers that the woman he loves is in the city Other stories included in this collection are St John s Eve The Cloak How the Two Ivans Quarrelled The Mysterious Portrait and The Calash Taras Bulba and Other Tales Nikolai Vasilievich Gogol,John Cournos,Ari Miletus,2014-03-12 Russian literature so full of enigmas contains no greater creative mystery than Nikolai Vasil evich Gogol 1809 1852 who has done for the Russian novel and Russian prose what Pushkin has done for Russian poetry Before these two men came Russian literature can hardly have been said to exist It was pompous and effete with pseudo classicism foreign influences were strong in the speech of the upper circles there was an over fondness for German French and English words Between them the two friends by force of their great genius cleared away the debris which made for sterility and erected in their stead a new structure out of living Russian words The spoken word born of the people gave soul and wing to literature only by coming to earth the native earth was it enabled to soar Coming up from Little Russia the Ukraine with Cossack blood in his veins Gogol injected his own healthy virus into an effete body blew his own virile spirit the spirit of his race into its nostrils and gave the Russian novel its direction to this very day More than that The nomad and romantic in him troubled and restless with Ukrainian myth legend and song impressed upon Russian literature faced with the realities of modern life a spirit titanic and in clash with its material and produced in the mastery of this every day material commonly called sordid a phantasmagoria intense with beauty A clue to all Russian realism may be found in a Russian critic's observation about Gogol: Seldom has nature created a man so romantic in bent yet so masterly in portraying all that is unromantic in life. But this statement does not cover the whole ground for it is easy to see in almost all of Gogol's work his free Cossack soul trying to break through the shell of sordid to-day like some ancient demon essentially Dionysian. So that his works true though they are to our life are at once a reproach, a protest and a challenge ever calling for joy, ancient joy that is no more with us. And they have all the joy and sadness of the Ukrainian songs he loved so much. Ukrainian was to Gogol the language of the soul and it was in Ukrainian songs rather than in old chronicles of which he was not a little contemptuous that he read the history of his people. Time and again in his essays and in his letters to friends he expresses his boundless joy in these songs: O songs you are my joy and my life. How I love you. What are the bloodless chronicles I pore over beside those clear live chronicles I cannot live without songs they reveal everything more and more clearly oh how clearly gone by life and gone by men. The songs of Little Russia are her everything her poetry her history and her ancestral grave. He who has not penetrated them deeply knows nothing of the past of this blooming region of Russia. Indeed so great was his enthusiasm for his own land that after collecting material for many years the year 1833 finds him at work on a history of poor Ukraine a work planned to take up six volumes and writing to a friend at this time he promises to say much in it that has not been said before him. Furthermore he intended to follow this work with a universal history in eight volumes with a view to establishing as far as may be gathered Little Russia and the world in proper relation connecting the two a quixotic task surely. A poet passionate religious loving the heroic we find him constantly impatient and fuming at the lifeless chronicles which leave him cold as he seeks in vain for what he cannot find. Nowhere he writes in 1834 can I find anything of the time which ought to be richer than any other in events. Here was a people whose whole existence was passed in activity and which even if nature had made it inactive was compelled to go forward to great affairs and deeds because of its neighbours its geographic situation the constant danger to its existence.
