The eye is a complex organ that allows us to see. It consists of several parts, including the cornea, iris, lens, and retina. The cornea is the front part of the eye that helps to focus light. The iris is the colored part of the eye that controls the amount of light that enters. The lens is a transparent structure that focuses light on the retina. The retina is the back part of the eye that contains light-sensitive cells that send signals to the brain.

Light enters the eye through the cornea and passes through the iris and lens. The lens focuses the light on the retina, which is the back part of the eye. The retina contains light-sensitive cells called rods and cones. Rods are responsible for vision in low light, while cones are responsible for color vision. The signals from the rods and cones are sent to the brain through the optic nerve.

The human body is a complex system of organs and tissues that work together to keep us alive. The main parts of the body are the head, neck, torso, and limbs. The head contains the brain, which is the control center of the body. The neck contains the trachea, which is the windpipe. The torso contains the heart, lungs, and stomach. The limbs are the arms and legs.

The human body is made up of many different types of cells. Some cells are responsible for producing energy, while others are responsible for protecting the body from disease. The cells work together to keep the body healthy and functioning properly.
