Shanks,A.J. Banday,Richard S. Ellis,Carlos S. Frenk,A.W. Wolfendale,2012-12-06 This book represents the proceedings from the NATO sponsored Advanced Research Workshop entitled Observational Tests of Inflation held at the University of Durham England on the 10th 14th December 1990 In recent years the cosmological inflation model has drawn together the worlds of particle physics theoretical cosmology and observational astronomy The aim of the workshop was to bring together experts in all of these fields to discuss the current status of the inflation theory and its observational predictions The simplest inflation model makes clear predictions which are testable by astronomical observation Foremost is the prediction that the cosmological density parameter  $\Omega$  should have a value negligibly different from the critical Einstein de Sitter value of 1 The other main prediction is that the spectrum of primordial density fluctuations should be Gaussian and take the Harrison Zeldovich form The prediction that  $n \approx 1$  in particular leads to several important consequences for cosmology Firstly there is the apparent contradiction with the limits on baryon density from Big Bang nucleosynthesis which has led to the common conjecture that weakly interacting particles rather than baryons may form the dominant mass constituent of the Universe Secondly with  $n \approx 1$  the age of the Universe is uncomfortably short if  $\Omega$  is the Hubble constant and the ages of the oldest star clusters lie within their currently believed limits
