Individual foreign investment in residential real estate by new middle class and super rich investors is re emerging as a key issue in academic policy and public debates around the world At its most abstract global real estate is increasingly thought of as a liquid asset class that is targeted by foreign individual investors who are seeking to diversify their investment portfolios But foreign investors are also motivated by intergenerational familial security transnational migration strategies and short term educational plans which are all closely entwined with global real estate investment Government and local public responses to the latest manifestation of global real estate investment have taken different forms These range from pro foreign investment primarily justified on geopolitical and macro economic grounds to anti foreign investment for reasons such as mitigating public dissent and protecting the local housing market Within this changing geopolitical context this book offers a diverse range of case studies from Canada Hong Kong Singapore Russia Australia and Korea It will be of interest to academics policymakers and university students who are interested in the globalisation of local real estate The chapters in this book were originally published in the International Journal of Housing Policy      From Case to Law William W.

Guo, 2025-10-01 This book provides an in depth account of how judicial decisions are published and used in the Netherlands as a source of law The findings are linked to the existing English language literature related to the role of cases in civil law jurisdictions in order to seek new insights that may enrich this body of scholarly writings This book also describes the efforts of China since the 1980s to create a case law system and explores the possible implications that can be drawn from the experiences with case law in the Netherlands for China to further enhance its case law practice Contrary to the commonly adopted result oriented approach this study experimented with a processual approach to study the role of judicial decisions as a source of law in a codified legal system It is submitted that cases cannot be said to be purely judge made law in a civil law jurisdiction as this study demonstrates that which judgments eventually become the leading cases that shape the law depends on the outcome of a process of rational discourse in which not only judges but also other actors such as legal scholars and practising lawyers participate and exercise influence      Housing Reform and China's Real Estate Industry
