Spoken Word Production And Its Breakdown In Aphasia:

Spoken Word Production and Its Breakdown In Aphasia Lyndsey Nickels, 2014-06-03 This volume combines in depth reviews of models of spoken word production and cognitive neuropsychological disorders of spoken word production The first section provides a detailed discussion of the development and structure of current models of language production using data from normal subjects It is these models that form the basis of the study and therefore the text attempts to explain their processing mechanisms and assumptions clearly The evidence used for the development of these models is described including experimental studies and observation of patterns in naturally occurring speech errors The second section focuses on studies of aphasic naming disorders and discusses these disorders in terms of the model described in the first section The emphasis is on single case studies These are reviewed in three chapters examining semantic errors and disorders the range of symptoms attributed to disorders of lexical retrieval and deficits of phonological encoding The text assumes that the reader has some familiarity with the linguistic and psychological terminology relevant to these areas and therefore is most suited to the graduate student or researcher lecturer

Rehabilitation of Spoken Word Production in Aphasia Lyndsey Nickels, 2002 This volume focuses on the remediation of impairments of word production in aphasia It is restricted to studies focusing on single word production and comprises papers by some of the researchers most active in this field worldwide The scope of the papers is broad and includes many relatively under researched areas and techniques All the papers have in common a methodological rigour and the use of a single case or case series approach A range of treatment tasks are evaluated phonological tasks such as phonological cueing and word repetition and judgements regarding the phonological form orthographic tasks such as orthographic cueing word reading and writing to dictation semantic tasks such as semantic cueing the use of gesture computer presentation of tasks and even just repeated attempts at naming In addition the individuals treated using these techniques varied in the nature of their impairments and or level of impairment that was targeted The majority aimed to improve word retrieval generally but one treatment was aimed specifically at verb retrieval and another at improving accuracy of word production for an individual with a phonological encoding impairment Each paper relates the outcome of treatment to theoretical accounts of impairment and one explicitly uses the results of therapy to inform these theories Taken together these papers provide a snapshot of the state of the art in the rehabilitation of word production in aphasia

Cognitive Neuropsychological Approaches to Spoken Word Production Lyndsey Nickels, 2002 The papers in this volume all examine the nature of spoken word production in aphasia and how this can inform current theories of language processing It comprises 7 papers by some of the foremost researchers in the field The first paper in the volume is an introduction by the editor Dr Lyndsey Nickels which reviews the state of the art of the cognitive neuropsychology of spoken word production both in terms of theory and methodology The individual papers address a range of topical issues including the levels of processing in speech production Lambon Ralph Moriarty Sage et al Wilshire the nature of the interaction between levels of processing Goldrick and effects of different factors on naming word class and context Berndt Burton Haendiges phonemic and orthographic cues Best Herbert Hickin Osborne lexical stress Howard Smith Taken together this volume provides the reader with an insight into the cutting edge of research in spoken word production

Aspects of Language Production Linda Wheeldon, 2013-12-16 This volume represents major research issues in language production today presenting readers with a picture of the breadth of current research in the field Contributors have focused on models of visual word processing aphasic speech object recognition and language production in children Many chapters highlight the need for psychological models of language production to learn from theoretical linguistics in order to become better informed about the structure of language itself Therefore this volume also includes chapters written by linguists for psychologists which serve to remind us of the complexity of structure and process in the languages of the world

Multidisciplinary Approaches to Language Production Thomas Pechmann, Christopher Habel, 2004 This volume comprises contributions from different disciplines cognitive psychology linguistics computer science neuroscience concerned with the generation of natural speech It summarizes the outcome of a six year long priority program funded by the German Research Foundation DFG that aimed at bringing together colleagues with different viewpoints but sharing a principal interest in the cognitive processes underlying language production The result is a state of the art discussion of one of the most fascinating branches of human behavior taking into account a particularly rich multidisciplinary empirical data base

Phonological Encoding and Monitoring in Normal and Pathological Speech Robert J. Hartsuiker, 2005 This book reports recent research on mechanisms of normal formulation and control in speaking and in language disorders such as stuttering aphasia and verbal dyspraxia The theoretical claim is that such disorders result both from deficits in a component of the language production system and interactions between this component and the system that monitors for errors and undertakes a corrective behaviour In particular the book focuses on phonological encoding in speech the construction of a phonetic plan for utterances on verbal self monitoring checking for correctness and initiating corrective action if necessary and on interactions between these processes Bringing together sixteen original chapters by leading international researchers this volume represents a coherent statement of current thinking in this exciting field The aim is to show how psycholinguistic models of normal speech processing can be applied to the study of impaired speech production This book will prove invaluable to any researcher student or speech therapist looking to bridge the gap between the latest advances in theory and the implications of these advances for language and speech pathology

Handbook of Communication Disorders Amalia Bar-On, Dorit Ravid, Elitzur Dattner, 2018-04-23 The domain of Communication Disorders has grown exponentially in the last two decades and has come to encompass much more than audiology speech impediments and early language impairment The realization that most developmental and learning disorders are language based or language related has brought insights from theoretical and empirical linguistics and its clinical applications to the forefront of Communication Disorders science

The current handbook takes an integrated psycholinguistic neurolinguistic and sociolinguistic perspective on Communication Disorders by targeting the interface between language and cognition as the context for understanding disrupted abilities and behaviors and providing solutions for treatment and therapy Researchers and practitioners will be able to find in this handbook state of the art information on typical and atypical development of language and communication dis abilities across the human lifespan from infancy to the aging brain covering all major clinical disorders and conditions in various social and communicative contexts such as spoken and written language and discourse literacy issues bilingualism and socio economic status

Handbook of Cognitive Neuropsychology Brenda Rapp, 2015-12-22 This volume reviews the full range of cognitive domains that have benefited from the study of deficits Chapters covered include language memory object recognition action attention consciousness and temporal cognition

The Handbook of Psycholinguistic and Cognitive Processes Jackie Guendouzi, Filip Loncke, Mandy J. Williams, 2011-01-07 This handbook includes an overview of those areas of cognition and language processing that are relevant to the field of communication disorders and provides examples of theoretical approaches to problems and issues in communication disorders The first section includes a collection of chapters that outline some of the basic considerations and areas of cognition and language that underlie communication processing a second section explains and exemplifies some of the influential theories of psycholinguistic cognitive processing and the third section illustrates theoretical applications to clinical populations There is coverage of theories that have been either seminal or controversial in the research of communication disorders Given the increasing multi cultural workload of many practitioners working with clinical populations chapters relating to bilingual populations are also included The volume book provides a single interdisciplinary source where researchers and students can access information on psycholinguistic and cognitive processing theories relevant to clinical populations A range of theories models and perspectives are provided The range of topics and issues illustrate the relevance of a dynamic interaction between theoretical and applied work and retains the complexity of psycholinguistic and cognitive theory for readers both researchers and graduate students whose primary interest is the field of communication disorders
