Interstellar Harmonics: Poetry for the Heart Li'ke Ra Quicksilver, 2009-11-24 The poems herein were created from my experiences in life dreams automatic writing divine inspiration and about and to several friends For instance Raw Gypsy Blues came from when I lost three relatives and a fiancé over a period of four months and I couldn't handle any more death and there were many more in a period of six years I had relatives possessing animosity toward me because I could not attend all the funerals Mourning really is a private thing I handled in my own spiritual way But on the other hand many of them are about the love I have for certain ladies and friends

some I have never met some I hope to meet They all know which ones are theirs and theirs alone For all the teachers I sought out and the ones who found me to help me keep what little sanity I have and to teach me to see the Light that I so procrastinate in seeing Ode to Divine Inspiration and Tears of a Gypsy is about my incarnation of this lifetime Tears of a Gypsy is also the title of my autobiography I have yet to complete for publication Yes I do know that many are obscure in content but c'est la vie and I hope that this does not distract the reader from enjoying or even criticizing of which I handle very well Cover design and with many thanks and love by Penelope Nash

Victorian Poetry and the Culture of the Heart Kirstie Blair, 2006-04-27 Victorian Poetry and the Culture of the Heart is a significant and timely study of nineteenth century poetry and poetics It considers why and how the heart became a vital image in Victorian poetry and argues that the intense focus on heart imagery in many major Victorian poems highlights anxieties in this period about the ability of poetry to act upon its readers In the course of the nineteenth century this study argues increased doubt about the validity of feeling led to the depiction of the literary heart as alienated distant outside the control of mind and will This coincided with a notable rise in medical literature specifically concerned with the pathological heart and with the development of new techniques and instruments of investigation such as the stethoscope As poets feared for the health of their own hearts their poetry embodies concerns about a widespread culture of heartsickness in both form and content In addition concerns about the heart's status and actions reflect upon questions of religious faith and doubt and feed into issues of gender and nationalism This book argues that it is vital to understand how this wider culture of the heart informed poetry and was in turn influenced by poetic constructs Individual chapters on Barrett Browning Arnold and Tennyson explore the vital presence of the heart in major works by these poets including Aurora Leigh Empedocles on Etna In Memoriam and Maud while the wide ranging opening chapters present an argument for the mutual influence of poetry and physiology in the period and trace the development of new theories of rhythm as organic and affective
