This article reviews and critiques community-based research on the effects of homelessness on children. Homeless children confront serious threats to their ability to succeed and their future well-being. Of particular concern are health problems, hunger, poor nutrition, developmental delays, anxiety, depression, behavioral problems, and educational underachievement. Factors that may mediate the observed outcomes include inadequate shelter conditions, instability in residences and shelters, inadequate services, and barriers to accessing services that are available. Public policy initiatives are needed to meet the needs of homeless children.

Research on the impact of homelessness on children indicates that homeless children (generally identified as those in emergency shelter facilities with their families) confront serious threats to their well-being. Of particular concern are health problems, hunger and poor nutrition, developmental delays, psychological problems, and educational underachievement. This article examines the problems faced by homeless children in each of these areas. Where possible, we describe the extent to which homeless children are at a disadvantage, relative not only to the population at large but to other poor children. That is, we attempt to understand to what extent problems are associated with homelessness per se and to what extent they are linked with extreme poverty.

A second task of this article is to understand how homelessness leads to the outcomes we document and to identify which conditions in the lives of homeless children lead to particular adverse effects. As Molnar and Rubin (1991) pointed out, homelessness is a composite of many conditions and events, such as poverty, changes in residence, schools, and services, loss of possessions, disruptions in social networks, and exposure to extreme hardship. Effects of homelessness on children may be mediated by any of these ecological conditions and by their effects on parents and the family system. Research on homeless children, however, has not generally examined mediating mechanisms. We focus on mechanisms that can be influenced by social policy, namely, inadequate shelter conditions, instability of shelters and residences, lack of adequate services, and barriers to accessing available services. A final section describes linkages among outcomes and discusses implications for public policy.

Health Problems

Studies have consistently found that homeless children experience elevated levels of acute and chronic health problems. Risk for health problems begins before birth. Chavkin, Kristal, Seabron, and Guigli (1987) compared the reproductive experience of 401 homeless women in welfare hotels in New York City with that of 13,249 women in public housing and with all live births in New York City during the same time period. Significantly more of the homeless women (16%, compared with 11% of women in public housing and 7% of all women) had low birth-weight babies. Infant mortality was also extraordinarily high: 25 deaths per 1,000 live births among the homeless women, compared with 17 per 1,000 for housed poor women and 12 per 1,000 for women citywide.

Wright (1987, 1990, 1991) examined the medical records of 1,028 homeless children under 15 years of age who were treated in the Robert Wood Johnson Health Care for the Homeless programs in 16 cities. He compared the occurrence of various diseases and disorders among homeless children with rates reported in the National Ambulatory Medical Care Survey for U.S. ambulatory patients ages 15 and under. All of the disorders studied were more common among homeless children, often occurring at double the rate observed in the general pediatric caseload. The most common disorders among homeless children were upper respiratory infections (42% vs. 22% in the national sample), minor skin ailments (20% vs. 5% in the national sample), ear disorders (18% vs. 12% in the national sample), chronic physical disorders (15% vs. 9% in the national sample), and gastrointestinal disorders (15% vs. 4% in the national sample). Infectious ailments, although less common than other disorders among homeless children (7%), occurred at more than 35 times the rate of those in the national sample. The Health Care for the Homeless and National Ambulatory Medical Care Survey samples differ along several dimensions. Members of the homeless sample are more likely to be poor, members of minority groups, and urban dwellers. Also, both surveys assess prevalence among those who use health services rather than among the general population. Al-

Bob Blumenthal,2005 How do you teach children to value peace and appreciate diversity One way is to provide them with books with themes that promote these ideas The Parent Teacher Guide to Children s Books on Peace and Tolerance offers readers a wide variety of award winning titles along with annotations and grade level recommendations The book is divided into the following sections Preschool grade three Grades 4 6 Middle school and High school Each section has over 100 listings Topics include civil rights the Holocaust slavery Native Americans bullying war child abuse bigotry cooperation acceptance apartheid family relationships Arab Israeli conflict controlling anger the Civil War the Vietnam War WWII gays and lesbians and other social issues Many of these books are the recipients of the following awards and honors Newbery Award School Library Journal starred review Caldecott Award Boston Globe Horn Book Award American Library Association Notable Book Jane Addams Children s Book Award American Bookseller Pick of the List Kirkus Reviews starred review Publishers Weekly starred review Booklist starred review Coretta Scott King Award VOYA Top Picks National Book Award and the Michael L Printz Award This guide is an excellent resource for parents who would like their children to become peace loving accepting adults Teachers who are looking for books to supplement their curriculum will find the suggested titles to be among the best written works in the designated areas For example one would be hard pressed to find a better written book on the Holocaust for middle and high school students than I Have Lived One Thousand Years The author has done a great service by providing parents and teachers with a list of books that cannot be found anywhere else

Exceptional Child Education Resources ,1992 American Book Publishing Record ,2006 American Journal of Public Health ,1998-07 Out Of Sight, Out Of Mind Yvonne Vissing,2014-07-11 Because they re small they re easy to overlook Because their voices don t carry far it s hard to hear them We d rather not look too closely or listen too carefully And if we don t see them maybe they ll just go away But the invisible homeless cannot simply fly away to never never land or pull themselves up by their bootstraps or make a wish upon a star These homeless people are children and they are not always in the inner cities as Yvonne Vissing shows in this poignant study of families housing and poverty As many as a third of our nation s homeless are found in rural and small town America They are all too commonly out of sight and out of mind

Homelessness in small towns and rural areas is on the rise Drawing on interviews with and case studies of three hundred children and their families with supporting statistics from federal state and private agencies Vissing illustrates the impact this social problem has upon education health and the economy Families vividly describe the ways they have fallen through cracks in the social structure from home ownership into homelessness Looking toward the future Vissing asks if homeless children are destined to become dysfunctional adults and provides a sixteen year old girl s moving testimony of the vagabond life her homeless family led While the economy and the very nature of the family have changed over past decades housing education and human service industries have failed to adapt Vissing provides a planning model for improving support networks within communities and challenges Americans with a fundamental philosophical question Do homeless children merit fullscale social intervention Ultimately Out of Sight Out of Mind compels us not merely to voice concerns for family and community values but also to assert this commitment consciously through improved essential services Rural
