Head and Heart Fraser Watts, Geoff Dumbreck, 2013-08-26 Theologians and religious figures often draw a distinction between religion of the head and religion of the heart but few stop to ask what the terms head and heart actually denote Many assume that this distinction has a scriptural basis and yet many Biblical authors used the word heart as a synonym for mind In fact there isn't a strict separation of the two concepts until the modern period as in Pascal's famous claim that the heart has its reasons that reason can not know Since then many other philosophers and theologians have made a similar distinction The fact that this distinction has been so persistent makes it an important area of study Head and Heart Perspectives from Religion and Psychology takes an inter disciplinary approach linking the thinking of theologians and philosophers with theory and research in present day psychology The tradition of using framing questions that have been developed in theology and philosophy can now be brought into dialogue with scientific approaches developed within cognitive psychology and neuroscience Though these scientific approaches have not generally used the terms head and heart they have arrived at a similar distinction in other ways There is a notable convergence upon the realization that humans have two modes of cognition at their disposal that correspond to head and heart The time is therefore ripe to bring the approaches of theology and science in to dialogue an important dialogue that has been heretofore neglected Head and Heart draws on the unique expertise in relating theology and psychology of the University of Cambridge's Psychology and Religion Research

The Essence of Christianity Ludwig

Feuerbach, 2024-05-09 The Essence of Christianity is widely regarded as one of the most important and influential critiques of religion in modern philosophy In this work Feuerbach argues that the traditional Christian understanding of God is a projection of human nature and that religion is a reflection of human ideals desires and aspirations Schopenhauer and Nietzsche both take their satirical criticism about religion from Feuerbach and every aspect of Marxism can be found here in Marx s favorite Philosopher Feuerbach is a critical figure in the development of not merely Marxism but Materialistic Humanism in general Feuerbach explores the idea that God and religious beliefs are projections of human nature He argues that God embodies aspects of human nature and that religion is a reflection of humanity s self understanding The book is divided into two parts the first addresses the true or anthropological essence of religion discussing how God corresponds to human nature while the second part critiques the false or theological essence of religion challenging traditional religious beliefs as harmful misconceptions Feuerbach s projection theory reframes theology as a mirror of species consciousness wherein divine attributes omnipotence love reflect idealized human capacities Marx extends this logic to political economy arguing capital becomes a similarly reified abstraction dominating its creators The text s split structure descriptive anthropology vs critical theology parallels Kant s distinction between noumenal and phenomenal realms but Feuerbach collapses this duality into materialist monism This rejection of transcendental idealism directly informs Nietzsche s proclamation of the death of God as a humanist awakening

The Disciplined Heart Caroline J. Simon,1997-03-25 Often what passes for love is a product of self deception and wishful thinking Genuine love according to philosopher Caroline J Simon must be based on knowledge of reality and Christianity affirms that reality includes not just who people are but the unfolding story of who God intends them to be Taking the use of narrative seriously The Disciplined Heart draws on works of literature to display a Christian understanding of love in its various forms love of self love of neighbor friendship romantic love and marital love Using instances of love and its counterfeits in novels and short stories by such authors as Flannery O Connor Leo Tolstoy George Eliot and F Scott Fitzgerald Simon constructs an account of love s joys and obligations that both charms and instructs Learned astute and elegantly written The Disciplined Heart is a groundbreaking work at the intersection of theology
