The Dialectics of Post-Soviet Modernity and the Changing Contours of Islamic Discourse in Azerbaijan Murad Ismayilov, 2018-09-15 Azerbaijan's independence came after seven decades of militant atheism of Soviet modernization project and emerged into staunch secularism of Western modernity two factors that on a par with the country's precarious neighborhood promised a sustained indigenous effort towards the desacralization of the country's political space and the associated exclusion of religion from politics a modern blueprint that the Azerbaijani state and its society have stood united to diligently follow over the cause of the country's independent existence Yet the specific dynamics facing the country in the third decade of independence and the changing contours of its international engagements have gradually been working to set the country free from the stifling grips of Western style modernity and lay the groundwork for quintessentially and esoterically Azerbaijani pathway of statehood to follow one combining the nation's historical embeddedness in an Islamic milieu with its century old practical experience of modern policy making This book offers a detailed account of the dynamics behind the religious secular divide in Azerbaijan over the past two decades of independence and the conditions underlying the ongoing process of normalization of Islamic discourse and the rising cooperation across the country's secular religious political landscape and looks into some future dynamics this transformation is set to unleash It begins with an outline of hybrid intentionality behind the elite's manifold attitudes to Islam with particular focus on the strategy of separation between religion and politics in which those attitudes have found expression It then proceeds to show the complicity of civil society and the broader populace as well as the international community and the country's Islamic stratum itself in the reproduction of the narrative of Islamic danger and the resultant religious secular divide in post Soviet Azerbaijan The study then continues with an account of a number of dialectical tensions inherent in policy outcomes to which the hybrid nature of elite intentionality has given rise It then follows on to discuss key factors contributing to the ongoing normalization of Islam across the public realm and the gradual bridging of the religious secular divide amidst the ongoing state repression The volume concludes with a comparative insight into some common features and conditioning factors behind the dynamics underlying the religious secular nexus in Azerbaijan and across the broader region of the Middle East It also offers an insight into some future potentialities that the current dynamics have laid bare
