Rhetorical Accessibility Lisa Meloncon, 2014-11-30 Rhetorical Accessibility is the first text to bring the fields of technical communication and disability studies into conversation The two fields also share a pragmatic foundation in their concern with accommodation and accessibility that is the material practice of making social and technical environments and texts as readily available easy to use and or understandable as possible to as many people as possible including those with disabilities Through its concern with the pragmatic theoretically grounded work of helping users interface effectively and seamlessly with technologies the field of technical communication is perfectly poised to put the theoretical work of disability studies into practice In other words technical communication could ideally be seen as a bridge between disability theories and web accessibility practices While technical communicators are ideally positioned to solve communication problems and to determine the best delivery method those same issues are compounded when they are viewed through the dual lens of accessibility and disability With the increasing use of wireless expanding global marketplaces increasing prevalence of technology in our daily lives and ongoing changes of writing through and with technology technical communicators need to be acutely aware of issues involved with accessibility and disability This collection will advance the field of technical communication by expanding the conceptual apparatus for understanding the intersections among disability studies technical communication and accessibility and by offering new perspectives theories and features that can only emerge when different fields are brought into conversation with one another and is the first text to bring the fields of technical communication and disability studies into conversation with one another
