This presentation offers a firsthand orientation and might be used as a manual in a training course for the student of personality. Because of the restricted space of this monograph, concentration has been on cases and discussions concerning the individual's entrance into the adult world, his efficient or inefficient functioning in it. The development from infancy to adolescence is left for a later publication.

In the first part, effort has been directed toward making clear the underlying concept of "reality," and modern man's relation to it in our Western civilization.
