Taste & Smell

Taste & smell

Most of our special senses are chemoreception systems: gustation (taste) and olfaction (smell). The degree to which we can respond to taste or olfaction, thereby using smell and taste to guide our behavior, depends on the number of receptors that respond to molecules dissolved in fluid (taste) and in the air (smell). The sense of taste is less discriminatory than the sense of smell, and there is an overlap between taste receptors. The sense of smell is highly discriminatory, with several types of olfactory receptors, each responding to particular odors. Taste and olfaction are related to smell, vision and hearing, important with the sense of touch, but taste is particularly affected by the sense of smell.

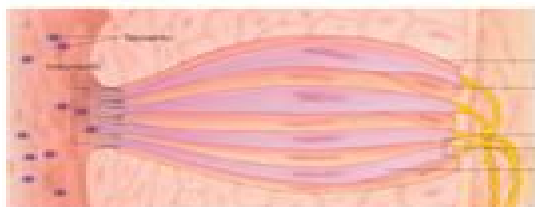

Concentrations

Taste receptors vary depending on the concentration of substances in a given solution or solid. For low concentrations, bitter, sour and salty receptors may taste pleasant.

Gustation

Gustation, the sense of taste, gives us information about the food and drink that we consume. Taste buds on the primary gustatory organ, the tongue, contain chemoreceptors called gustatory cells. These taste buds have four basic components: sweet, salty and fatty (A/B/C) buds, glutamate or bitter (D) buds, and sour (E) buds. The buds are connected to the brain by the vagus nerve or cranial nerve.

The taste bud

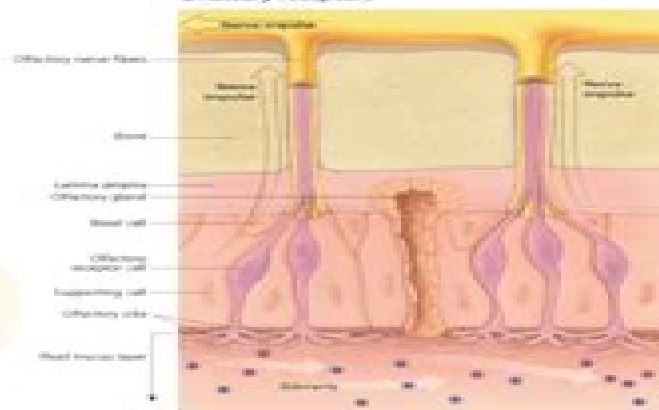

Each taste bud contains gustatory cells. Each taste bud is located on the surface of the tongue. The gustatory cells are connected to the brain by the vagus nerve. The gustatory cells are also connected to the brain by the vagus nerve. The gustatory cells are also connected to the brain by the vagus nerve.

Olfaction

The sense of smell is called olfaction, or the detection of odors. Olfaction depends on specialized chemical receptors, or chemoreceptors, located within the olfactory epithelium. These receptors are designed to respond to small amounts of an odorant, a molecule that can be smelled. The brain integrates the input from several different receptors to identify a particular odor. Humans can detect about 10,000 odors.

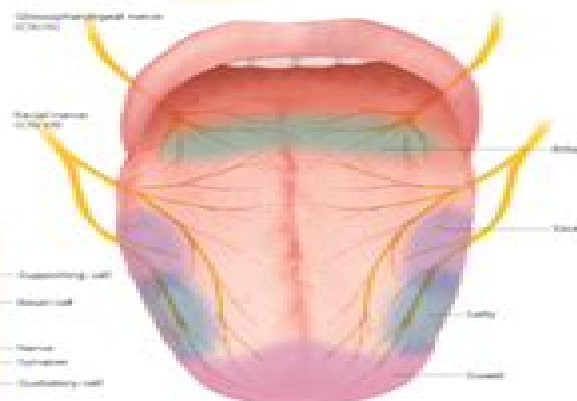

As air flows through the nose, the odors across the nasal cavity pass through the olfactory epithelium, bringing odorous molecules into contact with the olfactory nerve. Binding between the ability to detect odors by increasing the volume of air inhaled, which can increase the number of receptors.

Olfactory receptors

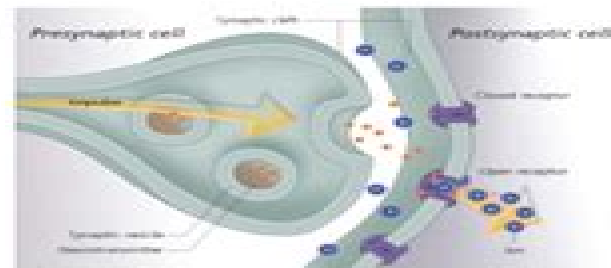

Olfactory receptors

Olfactory receptors in the nasal cavity are produced by the olfactory epithelium. These receptors are located in the olfactory epithelium. The olfactory epithelium is a specialized tissue that is located in the nasal cavity. The olfactory epithelium is a specialized tissue that is located in the nasal cavity.

Compound sweet and salty tastes, we are left with more receptors to taste compounds and about 1,000 taste buds are located on the tongue. The taste buds are located on the tongue. The taste buds are located on the tongue.

The synapse

Neurons communicate with other cells at a synapse. The site of a nerve impulse transmission. The space between the presynaptic, or sending, neuron and the postsynaptic, or receiving, cell is called the synaptic cleft. An impulse enters at the top of the postsynaptic cell, the impulse travels down the "axon" (neuron) and is called an action potential. These highly specialized chemicals carry nerve impulses from the presynaptic cell to the postsynaptic cell and the adjacent neurons or cells, either inhibiting or activating them in the target cell.
