

SONNET. II.

Beauty and Modesty are false of old,
Th' one claims her cheeks, the other claims
his chin;
Then Virtue comes, and puts her toe in (Quoth she) I make him lay th' immortal Gods
(Quoth Modesty) I own his shoulders, his Dime,
His Ups, (quoth Love) his eyes, his hairs is mine,
And yet (quoth Modesty) he is not them,
I mine Disdain with Loves congenial show
I, but (quoth Love) his locks are mine thy right,
His stately gait is mine (quoth Modesty)
And mine (quoth Virtue) is his Modesty.
Thus as they strive about this heavenly weight,
At last the other two to Virtue yield,
The Dime of Love, fought in their Beauties field,

SONNET. III.

He Swicks thinks, (and they once were the weak)
That virtue is the chiefest good of all,
The Academics on Idus call.
The Epicures in pleasure spend their youth,
The Peripateticks judge Silence,
To be the chiefest good above all other,
One man, thinks thus; and that conceives another:
So that in one thing very few agree.
Let Stoicks have their Virtue if they will,
And all the rest their chiefe-supposed good,
Let cruel Martians delight in blood,
And Myres lay their bags with gold to fill:
My chiefest good, my chiefe felicity,
Is to be gazing on my loves faire eye.

SONNET. IIII.

We were then as in one faire ferment,
Of some incited Gargander sweet heart,
Which other stars in brightness doe disport,
As much as Pe in Chastities pursuit.
But are they common natur'd stars: for why,
Those stars when other shine walle their pure light,
And when all other wandle out of sight,
They add a glory to the worlds great eye.
By these two stars my life is newly led,
In them I place my joy, in them my pleasure,
Loves piercing Darts, and Natures precious treasure
With their sweet fowls my bracing soule is fed:
Then when my sunne is absent from my sight
How can it thine (with me) but be dark night?

SONNET. V.

It is reported of faire Tiber Sower,
Quoth famous for his chivalry,
His noble minde and magnanimity,
That when the Trojan wars were new begun,
Whom'ter was deepe-wounded with his speare,
Could never be recovered of his woundes,
Nor ever after be made whole againe:
Except with that speares point he helpe was.
Even so it tarth with my fatefull love,
Who being wounded with his piercing eye,
Must rather thereby finde a remedy,
Or els to be releas'd, I know not how.
Then if thou hast a minde still to annoy me,
Kill me with kisses, if thou wilt destroy me.
