

1 MODELING AND ASSESSING LANGUAGE PROFICIENCY<sup>1</sup>

Since the beginning of this century psychologists and educationalists have been involved in a continuing debate on the number of factors implicated in language performance. Up till the late seventies factor analytic approaches have led to the definition of various numbers of language dimensions. In the early years of this century Spearman (1904; 1927) argued that a single factor, g, was of interest to explain all intellectual behavior. Thurstone's (1938) model contained seven primary mental abilities of which at least two were explicitly verbal: 'verbal comprehension' and 'verbal fluency'. Later researchers proposed several variables within the domain of language behavior alone (e.g. Davis 1944; Thurstone, 1946; Davis, 1972; Spearitt, 1972; Thorndike, 1973). Meanwhile, the division of g into several subfactors in general human intelligence models continued, almost always including a number of 'verbal' factors (Cattell, 1971; Vernon, 1971), and culminated in extremely complex models such as the Structure of Intellect model (Guilford, 1967; Guilford & Hoepfner, 1971; Guilford, 1982) with a total of 150 factors of which many are related to language behavior.

Much of this debate could have been avoided, given a better understanding of the poor quality of some measures to assess dimensionality (Carroll, 1989; Berger & Knol, 1990), problems in interpreting the results from correlational analyses in general (e.g., Cizko, 1985) and from exploratory factor analysis in particular (Gould, 1981; Vollermer and Sang, 1983), the equivalence of the metatheoretical assumptions underlying the different models (Stenberg, 1985a), or preferably, if Thurstone's (1947:56) own admonition, had been taken seriously, i.e., that "... factor analysis has its principal use at the borderline of science ... especially in those domains where basic and fruitful concepts are essentially lacking and where crucial experiments have been difficult to conceive".

The Construct of Language Proficiency Ludo Verhoeven, John H.A.L. de Jong, 1992-10-29 This book aims to open up new perspectives in the study of language proficiency by bringing together current research from different fields in psychology and linguistics. All contributions start out from empirical studies which are then related to applications in language assessment. The book also serves as a survey of recent developments in psycholinguistic research in the Netherlands. The book starts out with a thorough introduction of international literature on models of language proficiency, language development and its assessment. Section 1 deals with first language proficiency and addresses such problems as grammar in early child language, grammatical proficiency and its variance across a range of ages, reading abilities and writing skills. Section 2 focuses on multilingual proficiency and deals with test bias in relation to the background of the second language learner, bilingual proficiency in ethnic minority children, the development of the second language learner lexicon, communicative competence of school age children in the context of second language learning, the assessment of foreign language attrition and the dimensionality in oral foreign language proficiency.

Understanding L2 Proficiency Eun Hee Jeon, Yo In'nam, 2022-08-04 This edited volume is a collection of theoretical and empirical overviews of second language L2 proficiency based on four skills: reading, writing, listening and speaking. Each skill is reviewed in terms of how it has been conceptualized, measured and studied over the years in relation to relevant subconstructs of the language skill under discussion. This is followed by meta-analyses of correlation coefficients that examine the relationship between the L2 skill in question and its component variables. Unlike most meta-analyses that have a limited range of variables under investigation, our meta-analyses are much larger in scope to better clarify such relationships. By combining theoretical and empirical approaches, the book is helpful in deepening the understanding of how subcomponents or various variables are related to a particular L2 skill

Handbook for Arabic Language Teaching

Professionals in the 21st Century Kassem Wahba, Zeinab A. Taha, Liz England, 2014-06-03 This landmark volume offers an introduction to the field of teaching Arabic as a foreign or second language. Recent growth in student numbers and the demand for new and more diverse Arabic language programs of instruction have created a need that has outpaced the ability of teacher preparation programs to provide sufficient numbers of well qualified professional teachers at the level of skill required. Arabic language program administrators anticipate that the increases in enrollment will continue into the next decades. More resources and more varied materials are seriously needed in Arabic teacher education and training. The goal of this Handbook is to address that need. The most significant feature of this volume is its pioneer role in approaching the field of Arabic language teaching from many different perspectives. It offers readers the opportunity to consider the role, status and content of Arabic language teaching in the world today. The Handbook is intended as a resource to be used in building Arabic language and teacher education programs and in guiding future academic research. Thirty four chapters authored by leaders in the field are organized around nine themes: Background of Arabic Language Teaching; Contexts of Arabic Language Teaching; Communicative Competence in Arabic; The Learners; Assessment; Technology Applications; Curriculum Development; Design and Models; Arabic Language Program Administration and Management; and Planning for the Future of Arabic Language Learning and Teaching. The Handbook for Arabic Language Teaching Professionals in the 21st Century will benefit and be welcomed by Arabic language teacher educators and trainers, administrators, graduate students and scholars around the world. It is intended to create dialogue among scholars and professionals in the field and in related fields; dialogue that will contribute to creating new models for curriculum and course design; materials and assessment tools; and ultimately better instructional effectiveness for all Arabic learners everywhere in both Arabic speaking and non Arabic speaking countries.

Critical Reflections on Data in Second Language Acquisition Aarnes Gudmestad, Amanda Edmonds, 2018-09-15 This edited volume offers critical reflections on an essential component of research method in the field of second language acquisition: data. Scholars working on diverse areas e.g. pragmatics, corrective feedback, phonology and approaches e.g. corpus linguistics, concept oriented analyses, variationism have come together to identify challenges researchers face when collecting, coding and analyzing data and to provide guidance for making advancements regarding these aspects of research method. This volume also showcases three types of critical reflection. One involves building a relevant corpus of published investigations and using that database to identify methodological issues in existing research. Another consists of recoding and reanalyzing published work before reflecting on the impact that these decisions have on observations made about interlanguage. The third begins with a particular area or approach to second language acquisition and then offers a critical examination on the challenges that characterize the selected area or approach. Researchers and graduate students alike will benefit from an open discussion on methodological issues that are in need of improvement.

The Bilingual Lexicon Robert Schreuder, Bert Weltens, 1993-01-01 In the study of bilingualism the lexical level of language is of prime importance because in practical terms vocabulary acquisition is an essential prerequisite for the development of skill in language use from a theoretical point of view the mental lexicon as a bridge between form and meaning plays a crucial role in any model of language processing A central issue in this volume is at which level of the bilingual speaker's lexicon languages share representations and how language specific representations may be linked The contributors favor a dynamic developmental perspective on bilingualism which takes account of the change of the mental lexicon over time and pays considerable attention to the acquisition phase Several papers deal with the level of proficiency and its consequences for bilingual lexical processing as well as the effects of practice This discussion raises numerous questions about the notion of lexical proficiency and how this can be established by objective standards an area of study that invites collaboration between researchers working from a theoretical and from a practical background Expressing
