The Optical Aurora:

The Optical Aurora A. Omholt, 2012-12-06 The aim of this book is to describe and discuss the aurora as an optical phenomenon one which can be observed by the naked eye as well as with more sensitive optical detectors It continues the tradition of studying that impressive and imaginative play of nature the northern lights seen and discussed by the Greek philosophers as early as the sixth century B c Today the study of the optical aurora is only one of many ways of acquiring information about a major phenomenon the ejection of plasma from the sun the interaction of this plasma with the geomagnetic field and the injection of fast particles into the earth's atmosphere of the optical aurora is justified by the Hence the separate treatment particular scientific approach detection and interpretation of electromagnetic radiation approximately in the 1000-100000 Å region produced through interaction between the auroral particles and the earth's atmosphere Other techniques such as radio observations X-ray observations direct particle detections from rockets and satellites studies of magnetic storms and measurements of the magnetic field and plasma properties in the magnetosphere are as important or more important than the classical way of studying the optical aurora Nevertheless it was felt worthwhile to treat the optical aurora in a separate book perhaps mainly because today one author cannot master the whole subject with sufficient competence This book is thus one volume in a series of books giving a more complete picture of physics and chemistry in space

Carlson, A. Egeland, 2002-06-30 The auroral emissions in the upper atmosphere of the polar regions of the Earth are evidence of the capture of energetic particles from the Sun streaming by the Earth as the solar wind These auroral emissions then are a window to outer space and can provide us with valuable information about electrodynamic coupling processes between the solar wind and the Earth's ionosphere and upper atmosphere. Studying the physics of these phenomena extends our understanding of our plasma universe. Ground-based remote sensing techniques able to monitor continuously the variations in the signatures of aurorae in combination with in situ satellite and rocket measurements promise to advance dramatically our understanding of the physical processes taking place at the interface of the atmospheres of the Earth and the Sun. Decoding their complexity brings us closer to reliable prediction of communication environments especially at high latitudes. This understanding in turn will help us resolve problems of communication and navigation across polar regions.

Physics of Magnetospheric Substorms Syun-Ichi Akasofu, 2012-12-06

Man through intensive observations of natural phenomena has learned about some of the basic principles which govern nature. The aurora is one of the most fascinating of these natural phenomena and by studying it man has just begun to comprehend auroral phenomena in terms of basic cosmic electrodynamic processes. The systematic and extensive observation of the aurora during and after the great international enterprise the International Geophysical Year IGY led to the concept of the auroral substorm. Like many other geophysical phenomena auroral displays have a dual time universal and local time dependence when seen by a ground-based observer. Thus it was a difficult task for single observers rotating with the Earth once a day to grasp a transient feature of a large scale auroral display. Such a complexity is inevitable in studying many geophysical features in particular the polar upper atmospheric phenomena. However it was found that their complexity began to unfold when the concept of the auroral substorm was introduced. In a book entitled Polar and Magnetospheric Substorms the predecessor to this book I tried to describe the auroral phenomena as completely as possible in terms of the concept of the auroral substorm. At that time the first satellite observations of particles and magnetic fields during substorms were just becoming available and it was suggested that the auroral sub storm is a manifestation of a magnetospheric phenomenon called the magnetospheric substorm.
