undertakings and provoked responses in the realms of poetry fiction and drama Mapping this process discloses the ways in which eighteenth century authors applied their faculties of imagination to achieve finite goals and in so doing devised new ways of seeing the world through its future potential Approaching old projects through the language landscapes data and personas they left behind Alff contends this vision was and remains vital to the functions of statecraft commerce science religion and literature

Sterne among others the author argues that eighteenth century writers were curious about closet relations as such including favoritism patronage and voyeurism and also turned to the closet as a figurative bond between author and audience Dozens of texts published in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries were described by their writers or publishers as closets or cabinets such as the novella Miss C's Cabinet of Curiosity containing knowledge that originated in courtly closets prayer closets and similar intimate spaces The closet's longstanding associations with intimacy across social divides made it a touchstone for exploring the attachments made possible by the decline of the court on one hand and the proliferation of print the first mass medium on the other

Healing, Performance and Ceremony in the Writings of Three Early Modern Physicians: Hippolytus Guarinonius and the Brothers Felix and Thomas Platter M.A. Katritzky, 2016-12-05 While the writings of early modern medical practitioners habitually touch on performance and ceremony few illuminate them as clearly as the Protestant physicians Felix Platter and Thomas Platter the Younger who studied in Montpellier and practiced in their birth town of Basle or the Catholic physician Hippolytus Guarinonius who was born in Trent trained in Padua and practiced in Hall near Innsbruck During his student years and brilliant career as early modern Basle's most distinguished municipal court and academic physician Felix Platter built up a wide network of private religious and aristocratic patients His published medical treatises and private journal record his professional encounters with them as a healer They also offer numerous vivid accounts of theatrical events experienced by Platter as a scholar student and gifted semi professional musician and during his Grand Tour and long medical career Here Felix Platter's accounts many unavailable in translation are examined together with relevant extracts from the journals of his younger brother Thomas Platter and Guarinonius's medical and religious treatises Thomas Platter is known to Shakespeare scholars as the Swiss Grand Tourist who recorded a 1599 London performance of Julius Caesar and Guarinonius's descriptions of quack performances represent the earliest substantial written record of commedia dell'arte lazzi or comic stage business These three physicians records of ceremony festival theatre and marketplace diversions are examined in detail with particular emphasis on the reactions of respectable medical practitioners to healing performers and the performance of healing Taken as a whole their writings contribute to our understanding of many aspects of European theatrical culture and its complex interfaces with early modern healthcare in carnival and other routine manifestations of the Christian festive year in the extraordinary performance and ceremony of court festivals and above all in the rarely welcomed intrusions of quacks and other itinerant performers
