

POLITICAL EFFICACY

- Political efficacy:
 - Capacity to understand and influence politics
 - Faith & trust in govt.
 - If a person's political efficacy is high, then they believe they have power over the decisions of their government.
 - If a person's personal efficacy is low, then they believe they have little power over the decisions of their government.
- Internal efficacy: confidence in one's ability to understand, thus participate in politics
 - Relatively unchanged since 1950s
- External efficacy: belief that govt. will respond to citizens
 - Dropped steadily since late 1960s
 - Govt. too big, too unresponsive??

got tolerance?

Trzyna, 1987 Representing Women Beth Reingold, 2003-07-11 Women in public office are often assumed to make a difference for women as women in other words to represent their female constituents better than do their male counterparts But is sex really an accurate predictor of a legislator's political choices and actions In this book Beth Reingold compares the representational activities and attitudes of male and female members of the Arizona and California state legislatures to illuminate the broader implications of the election and integration of women into public office In the process she challenges many of the assumptions that underlie popular expectations of women and men in politics Using in depth interviews survey responses and legislative records Reingold actually uncovers more similarities between female and male politicians than differences Moreover the stories she presents strongly suggest that rather than assuming that who our representatives are determines what they will do in office we must acknowledge the possibility that the influence of gender on legislative behavior can be weakened distorted or accentuated by powerful forces within the social and political contexts of elective office Meeting the Economy's Labor Needs Through Immigration Georges Vernez, Rand Corporation, 1990 Reprint, 1993
