The chaos which has emerged over the G4S Olympics security contract was predictable and undermines confidence in those responsible for managing the Games There is now a last minute scramble to make sure there will be enough security personnel on the ground In evidence given before Christmas all those concerned gave assurances that the contract could be met despite more than doubling the number of guards No credible explanation has been given for an astonishing twelve fold hike in management costs from 10 million to 125 million and G4S still has not been able to deliver Now troops are having to be drafted in The Home Office needs to get a grip on LOCOG and G4S urgently It is still not known just how many security guards will actually be delivered or whether G4S will face any penalty The Committee will carry out a post mortem in September There is also dissatisfaction with how the DCMS has engaged with the Committee Legitimate monitoring of implementation has been an unnecessarily frustrating process characterized by a resistance to giving clear and consistent information and a readiness to depart from proper ways of conducting public business A big concern is that the Department has no intention of producing a single auditable account for the Games drawing together both the costs within the Public Sector Funding Package of 9.3 billion and those outside Such an analysis must be produced Sports, Exercise, and the Olympics Jilly Traganou, 2016-04-14 Designing the Olympics claims that the Olympic Games provide opportunities to reflect on the relationship between design, national identity and citizenship. The Olympic design milieu fans out from the construction of the Olympic city and the creation of emblems, mascots and ceremonies to the consumption, interpretation and appropriation of Olympic artifacts from their conception to their afterlife. Besides products that try to achieve consensus and induce civic pride, the Olympic design milieu also includes processes that oppose the Olympics and their enforcement. The book examines the graphic design program for Tokyo 1964, architecture and urban plans for Athens 2004, brand design for London 2012 and practices of subversive appropriation and sociotechnical action in counter Olympic movements since the 1960s. It explores how the Olympics shape the physical, legal and emotional contours of a host nation and its position in the world, how the Games are contested by a broader social spectrum within and beyond the nation, and how throughout these encounters design plays a crucial role. Recognizing the presence of multiple actors, the book investigates the potential of design in promoting equitable political participation in the Olympic context.
