Cooper, Adrienne Auslander Munich, Susan Merrill Squier, 2000-11-15 Although the themes of women's complicity in and resistance to war have been part of literature from early times they have not been fully integrated into conventional conceptions of the war narrative Combining feminist literary criticism with the emerging field of feminist war theory this collection explores the role of gender as an organizing principle in the war system and reveals how literature perpetuates the ancient myth of arms and the man The volume shows how the gendered conception of war has both shaped literary texts and formed the literary canon It identifies and interrogates the conventional war text with its culturally determined split between warlike men and peaceful women and it confirms that women's role in relation to war is much more complex and complicitous than such essentializing suggests. The contributors examine a wide range of familiar texts from fresh perspectives and bring new texts to light. Collectively these essays range in time from the Trojan War to the nuclear age. The essays collected in this volume were first presented at the international and interdisciplinary conference on the Graphic Novel hosted by the Institute for Cultural Studies, University of Leuven, in 2000. The issues discussed by the conference are twofold. Firstly, that of trauma representation, an issue escaping by definition from any imaginable specific field. Secondly, that of a wide range of topics concerning the concept of visual narrative an issue which can only be studied by comparing as many media and practices as possible The essays of this volume are grouped here in two major parts their focus depending on either a more general topic or on a very specific graphic author The first part of the book Violence and trauma in the Graphic Novel opens with a certain number of reflections on the representation of violence in literary and visual graphic novels and continues with a whole set of close readings of graphic novels by Art Spiegelman Maus I and II and Jacques Tardi whose masterwork C tait la guerre des tranchés is still waiting for its complete English translation The second part of the book presents in the first place a survey of the current graphic novel production and insists sharply on the great diversity of the range in the various continental traditions for instance underground comix and feminist comics high art graphic novels critical superheroes fiction whose separation is nowadays increasingly difficult to maintain It continues and ends with a set of theoretical interventions where not only the reciprocal influences of national and international traditions but also those between genres and media are strongly forwarded the emphasis being here mainly on problems concerning ways of looking and positions of spectatorship

Reporting the First World War in the Liminal Zone Sara Prieto, 2018-02-28
This book deals with an aspect of the Great War that has been largely overlooked: the war reportage written based on British and American authors' experiences at the Western Front. It focuses on how the liminal experience of the First World War was portrayed in a series of works of literary journalism at different stages of the conflict, from the summer of 1914 to the Armistice in November 1918. Sara Prieto explores a number of representative texts written by a series of civilian eyewitnesses who have been passed over in earlier studies of literature and journalism in the Great War. The texts under discussion are situated in the liminal zone as they were written in the middle of a transitional period, half way between two radically different literary styles: the romantic and idealising ante bellum tradition and the cynical and disillusioned modernist school of writing. They are also the product of the various stages of a physical and moral journey which took several authors into the fantastic albeit nightmarish world of the Western Front, where their understanding of reality was transformed beyond anything they could have anticipated.
