Is Student-Right-to-Know All You Should Know? Thomas Bailey, Juan Carlos Calcagno, Davis Jenkins, Timothy Leinbach, Gregory Kienzl, 2005 Over the last decade policymakers educators and researchers have increasingly sought to understand community college policies and practices that promote students success This effort has been partly driven by an increased emphasis on outcome accountability but it has also promoted a productive discussion about improving institutional performance The research reported here has two related goals One goal is to work towards strengthening the ability to assess and compare institutional performance We thus have developed a model that can be used to adjust simple graduation rates for institutional characteristics such as student composition college resources size and location all of which might influence those rates Our long term goal is to understand how to improve student outcomes so the paper also uses the model to measure the effect of those institutional characteristics on graduation rates We use data from the Integrated Postsecondary Education Data System IPEDS surveys applying a weighted least squares procedure for grouped data to estimate an institutional completion rates model This analysis confirms several hypotheses about institutional determinants of graduation rates at community colleges Our results indicate a consistent negative relationship between enrollment size and completion Additionally colleges with high shares of minority students part time students and women have lower graduation rates A final significant finding among institutional characteristics is that greater instructional expenditures are related to a greater likelihood of graduation The method developed here can be used to better assess the performance of community colleges Contains 1 figure and 3 tables The Law of Higher Education William A.

Committee on Labor and Human Resources, 1990 Beyond Student Right-to-Know Data Thomas Bailey, Juan Carlos Calcagno, Davis Jenkins, Timothy Leinbach, Gregory Kienzl, 2005 Policymakers educators and researchers recognize the importance of community colleges as open door institutions that provide a wide range of students with access to college At the same time competing demands for the state funds that would support community colleges have resulted in reduced public allocations and higher student tuition fees Understandably therefore both state policymakers and parents are increasingly focused on the returns to their public or private investments in education and the outcomes of community college attendance are now under greater scrutiny To facilitate the evaluation of the colleges there are now available data through the Student Right to Know and Campus Security Act 1990 which amended the Higher Education Act on every college s graduation rate for fall semester cohorts of first time fulltime FTFT students in degree programs This information is known as the Student Right to Know SRK data Given the importance of completions this Brief reports on research conducted by the Community College Research Center designed to strengthen the public's ability to assess and compare community college performance by measuring the effect of certain institutional characteristics on graduation rates. The research consisted of the development of models based on SRK graduation rate data which can identify the institutional characteristics that might influence those rates and then measure the effect of those characteristics on the rates. The ultimate goal of the research is to help community colleges improve the educational outcomes of their students. Affirming Students' Right to Their Own Language Jerrie Cobb Scott, Dolores Y.
