Forest Decline in the Atlantic and Pacific Region Reinhard F. Huettl, Dieter Mueller-Dombois, 2012-12-06 Forest damage forest decline forest dieback not related to biotic agents is occurring in the Atlantic and Pacific regions In Europe and Eastern North America this serious problem is considered to be at least to some part related to industrial air pollutants and their atmospheric conversion products such as acid rain or ozone Forest declines in the Pacific region have been attributed largely to natural causes involving forest dynamics since air pollution and other negative anthropogenic influences are practically absent Presented here are typical decline phenomena in the Pacific and Atlantic region potential causes effects and mitigation strategies and the question whether there are any similarities on a functional or structural basis is addressed      Oceanography And Marine Biology Harold Barnes, 1990-12-31 The ever increasing interest in work in oceanography and marine biology and its relevance to global environmental issues creates a demand for authoritative reviews summarising the results of recent research Oceanography and Marine Biology an Annual Review has catered for this demand since its foundation by the late Harold Barnes more than 35 yea      Crop Improvement for Sustainable

Oceanography and Marine Biology R.N. Hughes, D.J. Hughes, I. P. Smith, A.C. Dale, 2015-08-26 The book examines basic areas of marine research subjects of special and topical importance and new areas as they arise This series is consistently among the highest ranking in terms of impact factor in the marine biology category of the citation indices compiled by the Institute of Scientific Information It is an essential reference for research workers and students in all fields of marine science and the series volumes find a place in the libraries of universities marine laboratories research institutes and government departments      Handbook for Restoring Tidal Wetlands Joy B. Zedler, 2000-08-30 Efforts to direct the recovery of damaged sites and landscape date back as far as the 1930s If we fully understood the conditions and controlling variables at restoration sites we would be better equipped to predict the outcomes of restoration efforts If there were no constraints we could merely plant the restoration site and walk away However

Insect-Plant Biology Louis M. Schoonhoven, Joop J. A. van

Loon, Marcel Dicke, 2005-12-01 Half of all insect species are dependent on living plant tissues consuming about 10% of plant annual production in natural habitats and an even greater percentage in agricultural systems despite sophisticated control measures. Plants possess defences that are effective against almost all herbivorous insect species. Host plant specialization observed in over 80% of these animals appears to be an effective adaptation to breach these defence systems. The mechanisms underlying plant defence to invading herbivores on the one side and insect adaptations to utilize plants for nutrition, defence and shelter on the other are the main subjects of this book. In the case of plants exposed to insect herbivores they include the activation of defence systems in order to minimize damage as well as the emission of chemical signals that may attract natural enemies of the invading herbivores and may be exploited by neighbouring plants that mount defences as well. For insects they include complex behavioural adaptations and their underlying sensory systems with their implications for learning and nutritional plasticity as well as the endocrinological aspects of life cycle synchronization with host plant phenology. Insect-Plant Biology discusses the operation of these mechanisms at the molecular and organismal levels and explicitly puts these in the context of both ecological interactions and evolutionary processes. In doing so it uncovers the highly intricate antagonistic as well as mutualistic interactions that have evolved between plants and insects. The book concludes with a chapter on the application of our knowledge of insect-plant interactions to agricultural production. This multidisciplinary approach will appeal to students in biology, agricultural entomology, ecology and indeed anyone interested in the principles underlying the relationships between the two largest groups of organisms on earth: plants and insects.

Microbial Control of Weeds D.O. TeBeest, 2012-12-06 It is appropriate at this time to reflect on two decades of research in biological control of weeds with fungal plant pathogens. Some remarkable events have occurred in the last 20 years that represent a flurry of activity far beyond what could reasonably have been predicted. In 1969 a special topics review article by C. L. Wilson was published in Annual Reviews of Phytopathology that examined the literature and the potential for biological control of weeds with plant pathogens. In that same year experiments were conducted in Arkansas that determined whether a fungal plant pathogen could reduce the infestation of a single weed species in rice fields. In Florida a project was under way to determine the potential use of a soil-borne plant pathogen as a means for controlling a single weed species in citrus groves. Work in Australia was published that described experiments that sought to determine whether a pathogen could safely and deliberately be imported and released into a country to control a weed of agricultural importance. All three projects were successful in the sense that Puccinia chondrillina was released into Australia to control rush skeleton weed and was released later into the United States as well and that Colletotrichum gloeosporioides f. sp. aeschynomene and Phytophthora palmivora were later both marketed for the specific purpose of controlling specific weed species.
