—THE WRITING OF THE NOVEL—

"I swear — by my life and my love of it — that I will never live for the sake of another man, nor ask another man to live for mine." — This one line from the epic novel Atlas Shrugged, encapsulates the objectivist philosophy that lay at the heart of everything Ayn Rand ever wrote. Born Alice Rosenbaum in St. Petersburg, Russia, Rand knew from the age of nine that she would make a career of writing, and that her goal would be "to present the ideal man — she and her family lived through the hardships and repression of the Russian revolution and the early years of Socialist rule. She saw clearly and quickly how socialist rule could lead to the deterioration of society, and how particularly devastating it could be to the self-directed individualism on whom she believed the advancement of the world depended. In 1926, at the age of 21, Ayn Rand (her name with "mine," Rand, changed her name (Ayn is Russian for "mine," Rand came from the brand name of her typewriter), and never returned to her native country. She spent only a few months in Chicago with the relatives who invited her to America, before leaving for Hollywood. Rand quickly found work and developed her English until, in 1932, she sold her first screenplay. She wrote more plays and a novel, We the Living, before setting her sights on the novel she planned to call Secondhand Lions, that would finally present her ideal man, innovative and uncompromising, artistic Howard Roark. "The story," she said, "is the story of Howard Roark's triumph. . . . It has to show every conceivable hardship and obstacle on his way — and how he triumphs over them, why he has to — and how he triumphs over them, with all its tangled chain of milleniums, compromise, servitude, and lies, that stands in the way of Howard Roark. In every man
