ABSTRACT

A recent study into the archaeological profession in 21 European countries resulted in recognising gender equality as a major topic that needs attention. The overall trend is that women will form the future majority of workers in archaeology. However, the conditions under which women work differ by country, and in several countries, women are paid less and are not well represented in leadership positions. Gender equality needs to be put on the agenda and each country should take measurements to close the gap.

Résumé: Une étude récente sur le métier d'archéologue dans 21 pays européens a eu pour effet de considérer l'égalité des sexes comme un sujet important qui nécessite une attention particulière. La tendance générale qui se dégage veut que les femmes constitueront à l'avenir la majeure partie des travailleurs dans l'archéologie. Toutefois, les conditions dans lesquelles les femmes travaillent diffèrent d'un pays à l'autre et, dans plusieurs d'entre eux, elles sont moins payées et sont peu représentées aux postes de direction. L'égalité des sexes doit devenir une préoccupation majeure, et chaque pays doit prendre des mesures pour réduire cet écart.

Resumen: Un estudio reciente sobre la profesión arqueológica en 21 países europeos dio como resultado el reconocimiento de la igualdad de género como un tema de importancia que necesita atención. La tendencia global es que las mujeres formarán la futura mayoría de trabajadores en

The Future Of European Archaeology:

The Future of European Archaeology Willem J. H. Willems, 1999 The Future of European Archaeology W. J. H. Willems, 1999 As head of the Dutch Archaeological Service Willem Willems is uniquely in touch with the movement towards greater archaeological cooperation in Europe As political borders lose their importance archaeology is forced into the forefront of the quest for a new cultural identity to reflect both the unity and heterogeneity of European society With extensive references to European legislation and community programmes Dr Willems sets out his controversial vision of a pan European coordinating body for archaeological research and heritage management in the 21st century Professional archaeologists cannot afford to ignore this authoritative vision of a centrally organised future The Future of Archaeology Gary M. Feinman, T Douglas Price, 2025-09-01 In recent decades an expanding cadre of archaeologists has embarked to the field and laboratories Their endeavors have sparked the collection of troves of data about worldwide pasts at multiple scales from the molecular to the macroregional Investigation has been amplified by new technologies including computers satellite imagery mass spectrometry and sequencers for ancient DNA As information rich findings are rapidly being deciphered it is clear that the temporal depth and global breadth of archaeological discoveries are sufficiently rich to inform us regarding key contemporary issues sustainability inequality governance well being and heritage Ernest Hooten once described archaeologists as the senile playboys of science rooting in the rubbish heaps of antiquity Although Hooten's view of archaeology as an esoteric discipline remains intact in some quarters clearly times have changed and in this volume a diverse suite of archaeologists marshal their thoughts regarding the current state and future of the discipline The Future of European Archaeology H. J. Willems, 1999 A Future for Archaeology Robert Layton, Stephen Shennan, Peter Stone, 2016-09-16 Over the last thirty years issues of culture identity and meaning have moved out of the academic sphere to become central to politics and society at all levels from the local to the global Archaeology has been at the forefront of these moves towards a greater engagement with the non academic world often in an extremely practical and direct way for example in the disputes about the repatriation of human burials Such disputes have been central to the recognition that previously marginalized groups have rights in their own past that are important for their future The essays in this book look back at some of the most important events where a role for an archaeology concerned with the past in the present first emerged and look forward to the practical and theoretical issues now central to a socially engaged discipline and shaping its future This book is published in honor of Professor Peter Ucko who has played an unparalleled role in promoting awareness of the core issues in this volume among archaeologists National-Socialist Archaeology in Europe and its Legacies Martijn Eickhoff, Daniel Modl, Katie Meheux, Erwin Nuijten, 2023-08-14 This edited volume is dedicated to national socialist archaeology as a Europe wide phenomenon It analyses national socialist attempts to denationalize the archaeologies of European nations by creating a new unifying European archaeology on a racial basis From the beginning of the nineteenth century archaeology began to develop into an important force behind processes of nation building. At the same time, structures of transnational academic collaboration contributed strongly to the internal dynamics of the research field, which was primarily organized on a national basis. In those European countries that were confronted with national socialist occupation and repression between 1939 and 1945, these transnational archaeological networks were to prove crucial for the development of national socialist archaeological policies. This volume will reveal how national socialist archaeology was to a extent valued positively in its time as highly innovative, even influencing the archaeology of non-occupied countries. Although in the final instance it generally failed to displace the national archaeologies in Europe, the volume also analyses the long-term impact of national socialist rule on the development of European archaeology. How did the attempts to create a unified European archaeology after 1945 continue to influence networks, methods and terminologies, institutional structures or popular representations of the early past? European Prehistory Sarunas Milisauskas, 2011-08-04. European Prehistory: A Survey traces humans from their earliest appearance on the continent to the Rise of the Roman Empire, drawing on archaeological research from all over Europe. It includes the Paleolithic, Mesolithic, Neolithic, Bronze and Iron Ages. Throughout these periods, the major developments are explored using a wide range of archaeological data that emphasizes aspects of agricultural practices, gender, mortuary practices, population genetics, ritual, settlement patterns, technology, trade and warfare. Using new methods and theories, recent discoveries and arguments are presented and previous discoveries reevaluated. This work includes chapters on European geography and the chronology of European prehistory. A new chapter has been added on the historical development of European archaeology. The remaining chapters have been contributed by archaeologists specializing in different periods. The second edition of European Prehistory: A Survey is enhanced by a glossary, three indices and a comprehensive bibliography, as well as an extensive collection of maps, chronological tables and photographs.

Historical Biblical Archaeology and the Future Thomas Evan Levy, 2016-04-08. Joint winner of the 2011 Biblical Archaeology Society Publication Award in the category Best Scholarly Book on Archaeology. The archaeology of the Holy Land is undergoing major change. Historical Biblical Archaeology and the Future describes the paradigm shift brought about by objective, science-based dating methods, geographic information systems, anthropological models and digital technology tools. The book serves as a model for how researchers can investigate the relationship between ancient texts, both sacred and profane, and the archaeological record. Influential archaeologists and biblical scholars examine a range of texts, materials and cultures: the Vedas and India, the Homeric legends and Greek Classical Archaeology, the Sagas and Icelandic archaeology, Islamic Archaeology and the Umayyad, Abbasid and Ayyubid periods. The groundbreaking essays offer a foundation for future research in biblical archaeology, ancient Jewish history and biblical studies.

European Archaeology as Anthropology Pam J. Crabtree, Peter Bogucki, 2017-03-21 Since the days of V Gordon Childe the study of the emergence of complex societies has been a central question in anthropological archaeology However archaeologists working in the Americanist tradition have drawn most of their models for the emergence of social complexity from research in the Middle East and Latin America Bernard Wailes was a strong advocate for the importance of later prehistoric and early medieval Europe as an alternative model of sociopolitical evolution and trained generations of American archaeologists now active in European research from the Neolithic to the Middle Ages Two centuries of excavation and research in Europe have produced one of the richest bodies of archaeological data anywhere in the world The abundant data show that technological innovations such as metallurgy appeared very early but urbanism and state formation are comparatively late developments Key transformative process such as the spread of agriculture did not happen uniformly but rather at different rates in different regions The essays in this volume celebrate the legacy of Bernard Wailes by highlighting the contribution of the European archaeological record to our understanding of the emergence of social complexity They provide case studies in how ancient Europe can inform anthropological archaeology Not only do they illuminate key research topics they also invite archaeologists working in other parts of the world to consider comparisons to ancient Europe as they construct models for cultural development for their regions Although there is a substantial corpus of literature on European prehistoric and medieval archaeology we do not know of a comparable volume that explicitly focuses on the contribution that the study of ancient Europe can make to anthropological archaeology

Digital Innovations in European Archaeology Kevin Garstki, 2020-12-10 European archaeologists in the last two decades have worked to integrate a wide range of emerging digital tools to enhance the recording analysis and dissemination of archaeological data These techniques have expanded and altered the data collected by archaeologists as well as their interpretations At the same time archaeologists have expanded the capabilities of using these data on a large scale across platforms regions and time periods utilising new and existing digital research infrastructures to enhance the scale of data used for archaeological interpretations This Element discusses some of the most recent innovative uses of these techniques in European archaeology at different stages of archaeological work In addition to providing an overview of some of these techniques it critically assesses these approaches and outlines the recent challenges to the discipline posed by self reflexive use of these tools and advocacy for their open use in cultural heritage preservation and public engagement

The Future of Palestinian Identity Sharif Kanaana, 2016-01-14 During the 1948 Nakba around three quarters of a million Palestinians were driven out of their homes and became refugees Since then they have not been allowed to return to their homeland but have not given up Originally concentrated mainly in neighbouring Arab countries they have in their attempts for survival spread throughout the world and are now found in most European countries the United States Canada and several South American countries This book is a result of a conference held on the theme of the Future of Palestinian Identity which resulted from a prevailing feeling among Palestinians both academics and otherwise that Palestinian identity seems to be suffering from a state of weakening and retreat The conference was intended to increase awareness of the dangers threatening Palestinian identity As a result the contributions to this volume study analyse and suggest solutions to the problems facing Palestinian identity today and centre around four main themes namely the history of the emergence and development of Palestinian national identity considering the circumstances which led to its emergence and the main stages in this development the constituent elements of Palestinian national identity looking at what makes a person Palestinian and the shared symbols of Palestinian identity the extent to which a shared Palestinian identity is necessary and the future of this identity Contributors include both Palestinian and international scholars The European Archaeologist: 1 - 21a Henry Cleere, Karen Waugh, Ross Samson, 2014-09-11

This volume gathers together the first 10 years of The European Archaeologist ISSN 1022 0135 from Winter 1993 through to the 10th Anniversary Conference Issue published in 2004 for the Lyon Annual Meeting Controlling the Past, Owning the Future Ran Boytner, Lynn Swartz Dodd, Bradley J. Parker, 2010-12-15 What are the political uses and misuses of archaeology in the Middle East In answering this question the contributors to this volume lend their regional expertise to a variety of case studies including the Taliban's destruction of Buddhas in Afghanistan the commercialization of archaeology in Israel the training of Egyptian archaeology inspectors and the debate over Turkish identity sparked by the film Troy among other provocative subjects Other chapters question the ethical justifications of archaeology in places that have alternative engagements with the material past In the process they form various views of the role of the archaeologist from steward of the historical record to agent of social change The diverse contributions to this volume share a common framework in which the political use of the past is viewed as a process of social discourse According to this model political appropriations are seen as acts of social communication designed to accrue benefits to particular groups Thus the contributors pay special attention to competing social visions and the filters these impose on archaeological data But they are also attentive to the potential consequences of their own work Indeed as the editors remind us people's lives may be affected sometimes dramatically because of the material remains that surround them Rounding out this important volume are critiques by two top scholars who summarize and synthesize the preceding chapters Urban Planning and Real Estate
