

Thrown by her horse in the back pasture, Charlotte awakens to face a bearded stranger. A sense of vulnerability sweeps over her. Who is this guy – all those Army clothes—and that gaudy sport shirt? Searching the ground, she finds a small rock and clinches it in her fist.

The Fugitive at Greyledge

God, she's lovely, Jude thought – older than I, not twice as old – certainly not old enough to be my mother.

Once she is home, Charlotte sees the young man who rescued her in a different light – he couldn't be the one who killed those two guys at Ft. Knox two years ago—back in '52. No, he's too gentle and even nice looking. She manipulates him into hiding out in the former slave quarters and into working her rundown plantation.

Jude becomes entangled in Charlotte's problems – separation from an abusive husband, impending loss of her property, and the decline of a once promising writing career. As they draw closer, Charlotte's depressed life becomes revitalized.

A local banker, in a scheme to take possession of Greyledge, enlists four local hoodlums to frighten Charlotte into leaving Grumble County. The plan gets out of hand. Jude tries to rescue her - but, can he?
