Star Society:

Literary Societies of Republican China Michel Hockx, Kirk A. Denton, 2008-01-01 Denton and Hockx present thirteen essays treating a variety of literary organizations from China's Republican era 1911-1949. Interdisciplinary in approach, the essays are primarily concerned with describing and analyzing the social and cultural complexity of literary groupings and the role of these social formations in literary production of the period. Literary Societies Of Republican China Kirk A. Denton, Michel Hockx, 1955-01-01 Literary Societies in Republican China provides a new and comprehensive perspective on the fascinating literary world of the most turbulent period in recent Chinese history: the Republican era of 1911-1949. Wedged between the fall of the Empire and the founding of the Communist state, the Republican period witnessed enormous social, political, and cultural changes. Traditionally, the period is seen as one of transition from the country being partially colonized and occupied to being an independent nation state; from Confucianism to socialism; from writing in classical Chinese to writing in the everyday vernacular. Modern scholarship, however, has become suspicious of such attempts to analyze history including cultural history as a journey from A to B via C. Instead, attention has turned to the thick description of complex historical phenomena without worrying about whether or not they fit into some neat linear scheme. Inevitably, such scholarship benefits from collaboration and teamwork from the juxtaposition of different insights and different materials in order to gain in overall breadth. Literary Societies in Republican China represents such teamwork and such breadth. The thirteen essays by eleven scholars from North America, Europe, and Asia present detailed discussions of particular literary groups active on the Republican era literary scene. Some of these groups are familiar representatives of what used to be considered the mainstream, while others represent literary styles that have hitherto been considered marginal or that have been ignored altogether. Each of the essays in this volume looks in detail at literary societies both as producers of literary views and texts and as organizations with sometimes very complex social structures. The result is a unique blend of literary, cultural, and social history unrivalled in any English language scholarship on China to date. The Evening Star Faye Haskins, 2019-09-11 The Evening Star: The Rise and Fall of a Great Washington Newspaper is the story of the 129-year history of one of the preeminent newspapers in journalism history when city newspapers across the country were at the height of their power and influence. The Star was the most financially successful newspaper in the Capital and among the top ten in the country until its decline in the 1970s. The paper began in 1852 when the capital city was a backwater southern town. The Star's success over the next century was due to its singular devotion to local news, its many respected journalists, and the historic times in which it was published. The book provides a unique perspective on more than a century of local, national, and international history. The book also exposes the complex reasons for the Star's rise and fall from dominance in Washington's newspaper market. The Noyes and Kauffmann families, who owned and operated the Star for a century, play an important role in that story. Patriarch Crosby Noyes' life and legacy is the most fascinating, a classic Horatio Alger story of the illegitimate son of a Maine farmer who by the time of his death was a respected newspaper publisher and member of Washington's influential elite. In 1974 his descendants sold the once great newspaper Noyes built to Joseph Allbritton. Allbritton and then Time Inc. tried to save the Star but failed.

Women Journalists and Feminism in China, 1898-1937 Yuxin Ma, 2010

A most remarkable change took place in the first half of the twentieth century in China: women journalists became powerful professionals who championed feminist interests, discussed national politics, and commented on current social events by editing independent periodicals. The rise of modern journalism in China provided literate women with a powerful institution that allowed them to articulate women's presence in the public space. In editing women's periodicals, women writers transformed themselves from traditional literary women to professional women journalists. In the period of 1898-1937, when journalism became increasingly independent of and resistant to state control, the women's media writings in the early decades of the twentieth century not only reveal the historical diversity and complexity of feminist issues in China but also cast light upon important feminist topics that have survived the Nationalist, Communist, and economic reform eras. Today, public debate on women's issues in Mainland China and Taiwan is shaped by past feminist discourse and uses a vocabulary and language familiar to readers of an earlier era. This book examines how women journalists constructed Chinese feminism and debated patriarchy and women's roles in the newly created public space of print media during the period of 1898-1937. It studies Chinese women's public writings in periodicals edited and staffed by women journalists in four major urban centers: Shanghai, Tokyo, Beijing, and Tianjin, at a time when urban society underwent major transformation and experienced drastic political, social, and cultural changes. The revolution that overthrew the imperial government in 1911, an attack on patriarchy by cultural radicals in 1915, 1919, and the advocacy of nationalism, liberalism, socialism, and feminism by intellectuals who received a Western-style education all worked together to undermine the Confucian notions of gender hierarchy, spatial separation of the sexes, and female domesticity among the well-educated urban classes. Doors of political participation, public activism, and production cracked open for courageous women who ventured into urban public spaces. From 1898 to 1937, urban women of the upper middle and working classes became increasingly visible at modern schools as well as in career and production fields, political activism, and women's movements. At the same time, women edited independent periodicals and championed women's rights. Women's periodicals provided a site where writers negotiated with nationalism, patriarchy, and party lines to define and defend women's interests. These early feminist writings captured how activists perceived themselves and responded to the social and political changes around them. This book takes a historical approach in its examination and uses gender as an analytical category to study the significance of women's press writings in the years of nation building. Treating women journalists as agents of change and using their media writings as primary sources, this book explores what mattered to women writers at different historical junctures as well as how they articulated values and meaning in a changing society and guided social changes in the direction they desired. It delineates the transformation of women journalists from political minded Confucian gentry women to professional journalists and of women's periodicals from representing women journalists' views to addressing the concerns and needs of the majority of women. It analyzes how the concepts of feminism and nationalism were embodied with different even contesting meanings at given historical junctures and how women journalists managed to advance various feminist agendas by tapping on the various meanings of nationalism. This is an important book for collections in Asian studies, journalism history and women's studies.

Publication, 1987 A Sense of Their Duty Andrew Holman, 2000 Using the towns of Galt and Goderich as case studies, Andrew Holman shows how population growth, industrial change and the expansion of government contributed to profound changes to Ontario's social structure between the 1850s and the 1890s with an identifiable and self-identified middle class emerging between the idle rich and the working class. Businessmen, professionals and white collar workers developed a new sense of authority that extended beyond the workplace and local electors, breadwinners and members of voluntary associations and reform societies set middle class standards of behavior that enjoyed currency and relevance throughout the twentieth century.
