Entrepreneurship, the New Economy and Public Policy Uwe Cantner, Elias Dinopoulos, Robert F. Lanzillotti, 2005-12-12 Silicon Valley is the most salient example of high tech industrial clusters Public policymakers throughout the world would like to learn the secrets of Silicon Valley in order to build their own high tech economies The existing literature on industrial clusters which traces back to Marshall 1920 focuses on the way in which firms benefit from locating in a cluster it suggests that once a cluster comes into existence it tends to reinforce itself by attracting more firms However a more important question is how to reach this critical mass in the first place In contrast to the literature evidence suggests that entrepreneurs rarely move when they establish high tech start ups Cooper and Folta 2000 This contradicts the notion that location choice analyses lead entrepreneurs to a high tech cluster A high tech industrial cluster such as Silicon Valley is characterized by concentrated entrepreneurship Following Schumpeter we emphasize the fact that the appearance of one or a few entrepreneurs facilitates the appearance of others Schumpeter 1934 We propose an agent based computational model to show how high tech industrial clusters could emerge in a landscape in which no firms existed originally The model is essentially a spatial version of the Nelson Winter model Boundedly rational agents are scattered over an explicitly defined landscape Each agent is endowed with some technology which determines his firm's productivity if he has one During each period of time an agent with no firm would make a decision as to whether he wants to start one This decision is mostly affected by the behavior of his social contacts who are all his neighbors
