

Challenges faced by teachers in teaching reading skills in comprehension. A case of Mberengwa South District Secondary Schools.

CHAPTER 1

THE RESEARCH PROBLEM

1.1 Introduction

Reading is an important element of the syllabus at secondary level. As it is important that learners should be equipped with the necessary reading skills that will enable them to successfully challenge any comprehension question in the examination. The study aims at investigating the challenges faced by teachers in teaching reading skills. The research also intends to investigate the methods that can be implemented to help learners to be able to read fluently and understand what they have read. Dewi (2015) postulates that English is used in the world as a standard language among people from different cultures, ethnic, and social background. The ability to teach reading effectively at elementary schools is one of the vital skills among teachers and learners. Reading is a major component in the teaching of literature. The teaching of reading has been conducted as early as in the early years where students start to learn how to pronounce letters correctly. This chapter will look at the background of the study, statement of the problem, research questions, limitations, definition of terms and the assumptions of the study.

1.2 Background of the study

Secondary school learners are lagging behind in reading and answering comprehension questions. Teaching reading skills has been difficult because of the challenges faced by the students in learning reading techniques. Some of the challenges that are faced by the students are lack of vocabulary, poor grammar, poor spelling, students' readiness and lack of exposure to books and reading materials (Hedge, 2010). The researcher observed that pupils perform poorly in English comprehension as evidenced by results of fortnightly and termly tests administered at school level. The researcher also observed that on yearly basis the form 4 results are also spoiled by the English Examination in Chingoma cluster as illustrated by the results analysis at the cluster level since 2011 which indicated that English language had low pass rates as compared to other subjects.
