

Jehovah's Witnesses History

Jehovah's Witnesses began from Charles Taze Russell's teachings. Charles Taze Russell was born in 1852 in Allegheny, Pennsylvania. He was one of five children. His mother wanted him to become a missionary some day. In 1861, she died. The family continued to go to a Presbyterian church. Eventually Russell was discouraged with some of the teachings of the Presbyterian Church and he joined the Congregational Church. He was elected a fundraiser for the church, and then decided it was against God's will to ask other Christians for money; he believed that God would give funds for what is needed.
