Linking Architecture and Education Anne Taylor, 2009-05-16 For the past forty years Anne Taylor has studied how schools classrooms playgrounds homes museums and parks affect children and how they learn As a result she has developed a holistic sustainable philosophy of learning environment design She argues persuasively that architects must integrate their design knowledge with an understanding of the developmental needs of learners while at the same time educators parents and students must broaden their awareness of the built natural and cultural environment to maximize the learning experience In other words schools and other environments can themselves become three dimensional textbooks When architects are cognizant of newer models of education and educators view the environment as more than a box in which to teach prescribed lessons the result is an informed architecture that enables children to discover the power of their own learning The book presents numerous examples of dynamic designs that are the result of interdisciplinary understanding of place Taylor includes designer perspectives forums derived from commentary by outside contributors involved in school planning and a wealth of photographs of thoughtful and effective solutions to create learning environments from comprehensive design criteria Because the concept of school is enlarged to a community campus the book also spawns a new model of teaching and learning This book is essential reading for educators architects and community members who are anxious to transform education in America and elsewhere Anne Taylor is the most outstanding educator leading proponent and practitioner in the three dimensional textbook field Her work is the finest resource available for connecting students young and old to their learning environments and visa versa Edward E Kirkbride NCARB REFP Before Western man divided the universe into discrete subject matter areas the order in the universe was and still is both interdisciplinary and holistic The branching of trees spiraling of shells meandering of streams and the radial designs of flowers for example represent an analogy of mathematics biology and art The current artificial separation of subject matter is in contrast to the way the world is constructed and the way children perceive it Architecture and the study of the built natural and cultural environment synthesize the world of material things and the world of ideas Further more it helps us to realize that we are a part of not apart from the environment This book is a tool and a gift to designers educators and students everywhere to assist them in seeing the meaning behind all that we view and use for living on earth To know our precious relationship to our surroundings is the intent of this book In this way life is a work of art and each of us is an artist Anne Taylor

Community Livability
 Fritz Wagner, Roger W. Caves, 2012-06-25 What is a livable community How do you design and develop one What does government at all levels need to do to support and nurture the cause of livable communities Using a blend of theory and practice experts in the field look at evidence from international state and local perspectives to explore what is meant by the term livable communities Chapters examine the various influencing factors such as the effect and importance of transportation options alternatives to the elderly the significance of walkability as a factor in developing a livable and healthy community the importance of good open space providing for human activity and health restorative benefits the importance of coordinated land use and transportation planning and the relationship between livability and quality of life While much of the discussion of this topic is usually theoretical and abstract Wagner and Caves use case studies from North America Brazil and the United Kingdom to provide substantive examples of initiatives implemented across the world This book fills an important gap in the literature on livable communities and at the same time assists policy officials professionals and academics in their quest to develop livable communities

Fourth Places Patricia Aelbrecht, 2022-08-26 This book challenges current views that public life is in decline and that contemporary urban design trends reliant on privatisation control events and thematic designs are to be blamed Drawing on detailed and extensive analysis of a case study that illustrates well such urban design trends it shows that informal social life and interaction occur more than its necessary in new master planned environments and new designed public settings whether public or private owned and or managed Furthermore it reveals the existence of a new category of informal public social settings which it calls fourth places because of their close relationship to Oldenburg's third places in terms of social and behavioural characteristics radical departure from the routines of home and work inclusivity and social comfort but distinct in terms of activities locations and spatial conditions being characterised by spatial temporal and managerial in betweenness i.e indeterminacy in form function and times and a great sense of publicness The acceptance of these findings problematises well established urban design theories about master planning expands existing social theories about the optimal conditions for public social life by empirically and spatially elaborating on them and redefines several spatial concepts for designing public space in relation to the specific dynamics of informal social interaction More importantly it brings optimism to urban design practice offering new insights into designing more lively and inclusive public spaces      Great Public Squares Robert F. Gatje, 2010 Forty outstanding urban spaces of the Western world analyzed and drawn at a common scale for easy comparison
