Speciation In Salamanders Of The Plethodontid Genus Ensatina:

Speciation in salamanders of the plethodontid genus Ensatina Robert Cyril Stebbins, 1949 The Biology of Plethodontid Salamanders Richard C. Bruce, Robert G. Jaeger, Lynne D. Houck, 2012-12-06 The fourth Conference on the Biology of Plethodontid Salamanders was held at The Mountain in Highlands North Carolina on June 12-14, 1998. Hosted by the Highlands Biological Station and sponsored by the Highlands Biological Foundation Inc, the conference afforded a state-of-the-art overview of these animals as evidenced by the contents of the present volume and the credentials of the contributors. In the following pages the reader will find the best current understanding of many aspects of plethodontid salamander evolution, systematics, development, morphology, life history, ecology, and field methodology. While the contents of this book consist of chapters developed from selected conference papers, their excellence is representative of the high overall quality of the conference presentations. The Highlands Biological Station is located on the Highlands Plateau in the southern Blue Ridge Mountains. As these mountains are a present center of plethodontid diversity and are considered by some to be the center of origin of the group, the Highlands Biological Station has historically been important in the study of these animals. A list of visitors to the Station for the last 70 years would include a who's who of twentieth-century North American herpetologists. The location and amenities of the Highlands Biological Station are unique. Within the city limits of Highlands at an elevation of nearly 1200 meters, the Station includes modern research laboratories, administrative offices, library facilities, as well as dormitory and living facilities.

The authors analyze the morphological, biochemical, and ecological differentiation of salamanders endemic to the Pacific Northwest: the Torrent Salamanders, Rhyacotriton. The authors analyze the morphological, biochemical, and ecological differentiation of salamanders endemic to the Pacific Northwest: the Torrent Salamanders, Rhyacotriton. Species and Speciation in the Fossil Record Warren D. Allmon, Margaret M. Yacobucci, 2016-10-05 Although the species is one of the fundamental units of biological classification, there is remarkably little consensus among biologists about what defines a species, even within distinct subdisciplines. The literature of paleobiology, in particular, is littered with qualifiers and cautions about applying the term to the fossil record or equating such species with those recognized among living organisms. In Species and Speciation in the Fossil Record, experts in the field examine how they conceive of species of fossil animals and consider the implications these different approaches have for thinking about species in the context of macroevolution. After outlining views of the Modern Synthesis of evolutionary disciplines and detailing the development within paleobiology of quantitative methods for documenting and analyzing variation within fossil assemblages, contributors explore the challenges of recognizing and defining species from fossil specimens and offer potential solutions. Addressing both the tempo and mode of speciation over time they show how with careful interpretation and a clear species concept fossil species may be sufficiently robust for meaningful paleobiological analyses Indeed they demonstrate that the species concept if more refined could unearth a wealth of information about the interplay between species origins and extinctions between local and global climate change and greatly deepen our understanding of the evolution of life Encyclopedia of Evolutionary Biology, 2016-04-14
