Violence, Inequality and Transformation: Apartheid Survivors on South Africa's Ongoing Transition Jasmina Brankovic, Brian Mphahlele, Sindiswa Nunu, Agnes

Ngxukuma, Nompumelelo Njana, Yanelisa Sishuba, 2020-01-29 Despite its lauded political transition in 1994 South Africa continues to have among the highest levels of violence and inequality in the world Organised survivors of apartheid violations have long maintained that we cannot adequately address violence in the country let alone achieve full democracy without addressing inequality This book is built around extensive quotes from members of Khulumani Support Group the apartheid survivors social movement and young people growing up in Khulumani families It shows how these survivors who bridge the past and the present through their activism understand and respond to socioeconomic drivers of violence Pointing to the continuities between apartheid oppression and post apartheid marginalisation in everyday life the narratives detail ways in which the democratic dispensation has strengthened barriers to social transformation and helped enable violence They also present strategies for effecting change through collaboration dialogue and mutual training and through partnerships with diverse stakeholders that build on local level knowledge and community based initiatives The lens of violence offers new and manageable ways to think about reducing inequality while the lens of inequality shows that violence is a complex web of causes pathways and effects that requires a big picture approach to unravel The survivors narratives suggest innovative strategies for promoting a just transition through people driven transformation that go well beyond the constraints of South Africa's transitional justice practice to date. A result of participatory research conducted in collaboration with and by Khulumani members, this book will be of interest to activists, students, researchers, and policy makers working on issues of transitional justice, inequality, and violence.

An Ordinary Country Neville Alexander, 2002. An Ordinary Country Issues in the Transition from Apartheid to Democracy in South Africa disputes the notion of a miracle transition in this country. It argues that the new South Africa had to happen in the way it did because of the specific history of the country and the players involved. While it identifies some of the turning points at which critical choices were made by local and international forces, it shows why, in retrospect, the known decisions were made rather than other possible ones. Alexander explores a range of issues in post-apartheid South Africa, including national identity and the rainbow nation, the Truth and Reconciliation Commission, and the role and status of language, showing the volatility, the tentativeness, and the fluidity of the situation that is evolving. In looking ahead at probable developments, An Ordinary Country predicts that South Africa will develop or stagnate as a normal bourgeois democratic social formation for the next generation, at least until the inevitable alternatives to the prevailing system of political economy regain their credibility.

Black Consciousness and South Africa's National Literature Tom Penfold, 2017-10-14. This book analyses Black Consciousness poetry and theatre from the 1970s through to the present. South Africa's literature, like its history, has been beset by disagreement and contradiction and has been consistently difficult to pin down as one united entity. Much existing criticism on South Africa's national literature has attempted to overcome these divisions by discussing material written from a variety of different subject positions together. This book argues that Black Consciousness desired a new South Africa where African and European cultures were valued equally, and writers could represent both as they wished. Thus, a body of literature was created that addressed a range of audiences and imagined the South African nation in different ways. This book explores Black Consciousness in order to demonstrate how South African writers have responded in various ways to the changing history and politics of their country.

Governing through Crime in South Africa Gail Super, 2016-04-22. This book deals with the historic transition to democracy in South Africa and its impact upon crime and punishment. It examines how the problem of crime has emerged as a major issue to be governed in post-apartheid South Africa. Having undergone a dramatic transition from authoritarianism to democracy, from a white minority to black majority government, South Africa provides rich material on the role that political authority and challenges to it play in the construction of crime and criminality. As such, the study is about the socio-cultural and political significance of crime and punishment in the context of a change of regime. The work uses the South African case study to examine a question of wider interest, namely the politics of punishment and race in neoliberalizing regimes. It provides interesting and illuminating empirical material to the broader debate on crime control in post-welfare neoliberalizing post-transition polities.

AF Press Clips United States Department of State. Bureau of African Affairs,1978 AF Press Clips ,1989-07 Framing the State in Times of Transition Laurel E. Miller,Louis Aucoin,2010 Analyzing nineteen cases this title offers practical perspective on the implications of constitution making procedure and explores emerging international legal norms You, The People: The United Nations, Transitional Administration, and State-Building Simon Chesterman,2005-07-07 The governance of post conflict territories embodies a central contradiction how does one help a population prepare for democratic governance and the rule of law by imposing a form of benevolent autocracy Transitional administrations represent the most complex operations attempted by the United Nations The operations in East Timor and Kosovo are commonly seen as unique in the history of the UN perhaps never to be repeated But they may also be seen as the latest in a series of operations that have involved the United Nations in state building activities where it has attempted to develop the institutions of government by assuming some or all of those sovereign powers on a temporary basis The circumstances that have demanded such interventions certainly will be repeated Seen in the context of earlier UN operations such as those in Namibia Cambodia and Eastern Slavonia the view that these exceptional circumstances may not recur is somewhat disingenuous Moreover the need for such policy research has been brought into sharp focus by the weighty but ambiguous role assigned to the UN in Afghanistan and the possibility of a comparable role in Iraq This book fills that gap Aimed at policy makers diplomats and a wide academic audience including international relations political science international law and war studies the book provides a concise history of UN state building operations and a treatment of the five key issues confronting such an operation on the ground peace and security the role of the UN as government judicial reconstruction economic reconstruction and exit strategies
