Autonomy and Interdependence of Higher Education Quality Assurance Mechanisms in Africa

Dennis Zami Atibuni

Busitema University

ABSTRACT

This is a conceptual critical review paper. It analyses the match and mismatch between the autonomy and interdependence of internal and external quality assurance mechanisms in higher education institutions in Africa as they strive to deliver quality graduates. The mark of quality of graduates is their employability and relevance in the job market. However, the current generation of graduates of higher education institutions in Africa is often blamed for negative issues regarding accountability, control, compliance, and improvement. Considering accountability, the graduates are noted to offer less value for money, fitness for purpose, and quality service delivery and transparency in the world of work. Their legitimacy, integrity, and standards when compared across the board is often questioned. The paper unravels the fact that these quality concerns are a result of the challenges of autonomy and interdependence between internal and external quality assurance mechanisms operating in the institutions. It asserts that the negative traits indicate that the curriculum, pedagogy, resources, appraisal, and feedback systems of courses taught to these graduates while still studying at the higher education institutions had gaps due to ineffective quality assurance.

Keywords: external quality assurance, higher education institution, internal quality assurance, quality assurance mechanism.

G-m. Lulat,2019-05-30 Relations between the United States and South Africa or the parts of the world these nations now occupy go nearly as far back as the very beginning of their inception as permanent European colonial intrusions This book is a critical overview of these relations from the late seventeenth century to the present Unprecedented in its scope and s Air University Quarterly Review ,1977 Africa Air University (U.S.). Schrire,1982 South Africa International ,1979 International Finance: Theory and Policy in Africa Daniel Gbetnkom,2012-01-26 It is now well known that there are close links between financial sector development and economic growth and in turn between economic growth and poverty reduction A well functioning financial sector that allocates finance to the best opportunities can contribute to a more diverse economy and a more equal society rewarding entrepreneurial newcomers and challenging an entrenched and sometimes corrupt economic and political status quo However at first glance the international finance theory and policies would seem to have little relevance for Africa as there were built up in response to developments that took place far from Africa and whose direct impact on Africa was limited Nonetheless key components of the international finance functioning are very relevant for Africa The ongoing global financial and economic crises that are shaking the world have come as a stark reminder that African countries have a direct interest in global financial stability even though they may not be the main actors In this line economic fundamentals sound national macroeconomic and structural policies and a sound and properly regulated financial system are as critical as ever in Africa This volume explores the application of the basic theory and the policies of international financial transactions in Africa It contains six chapters on conceptual and policy oriented issues Analyses raise important questions and offers favorable counter arguments to the application of international finance theory after bringing to focus the relevance of certain themes in Africas inter state and intrastate policies

An Inquiry into the Existence of Global Values Dennis Davis, Alan Richter, Cheryl Saunders, 2015-08-27 The world appears to be globalising economically technologically and even to a halting extent politically This process of globalisation raises the possibility of an international legal framework a possibility which has gained pressing relevance in the wake of the recent global economic crisis But for any international legal framework to exist normative agreement between countries with very different political economic cultural and legal traditions becomes necessary This work explores the possibility of such a normative agreement through the prism of national constitutional norms Since 1945 more than a hundred countries have adopted constitutional texts which incorporate at least in part a Bill of Rights These texts reveal significant similarities the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms for instance had a marked influence on the drafting of the Bill of Rights for South Africa New Zealand and Hong Kong as well as the Basic Law of Israel Similarly the drafts of Eastern European constitutions reflect significant borrowing from older texts The essays in this book examine the depth of these similarities in particular the extent to which textual borrowings point to the development of foundational values in these different national legal systems and the extent of the similarities or differences between these values and the priorities accorded to them From these national studies the work analyses the rise of constitutionalism since the Second World War and charts the possibility of a consensus on values which might plausibly underpin an effective and legitimate international legal order
