Abstract Chlamydia trachomatis is the most common sexually transmitted infection in the United States. The purpose of this study was to determine the prevalence of C. trachomatis in a community-based sample of young adults. A cross-sectional study was conducted in a community-based sample of 1,000 young adults (ages 18-24) in a large, urban, inner-city area. The prevalence of C. trachomatis was 1.2% (95% CI 0.4-2.0%). The prevalence of C. trachomatis was significantly higher in individuals who were sexually active (1.8%) than in those who were not sexually active (0.2%). The prevalence of C. trachomatis was significantly higher in individuals who had a history of sexually transmitted infection (2.5%) than in those who had not (0.5%). The prevalence of C. trachomatis was significantly higher in individuals who had a history of gonorrhea (3.5%) than in those who had not (0.8%). The prevalence of C. trachomatis was significantly higher in individuals who had a history of syphilis (1.5%) than in those who had not (0.5%). The prevalence of C. trachomatis was significantly higher in individuals who had a history of chlamydia (3.5%) than in those who had not (0.5%). The prevalence of C. trachomatis was significantly higher in individuals who had a history of genital herpes (1.5%) than in those who had not (0.5%). The prevalence of C. trachomatis was significantly higher in individuals who had a history of HIV (1.5%) than in those who had not (0.5%). The prevalence of C. trachomatis was significantly higher in individuals who had a history of other sexually transmitted infections (1.5%) than in those who had not (0.5%). The prevalence of C. trachomatis was significantly higher in individuals who had a history of other sexually transmitted infections (1.5%) than in those who had not (0.5%).
