discussed and the potential influence from Early Modern English and Late Modern English is assessed as well as the potential input from the Irish language. It is suggested that the tense system corresponds to that of Standard British English whereas the aspectual system differs to varying degrees in perfect progressive and habitual marking. It is further argued that the majority of the specially used aspectual categories in Hiberno English could have been influenced in their development by influence from both the Irish language i.e. Gaelic and by influence from earlier British English language structures which were in use during the formative stages of the variety. This is not the case for the distinctive Hiberno English after perfect however which is entirely modeled on a corresponding Irish language structure. ~The tense-aspect system of the

The expression of time is fundamental in communication and languages have developed a variety of means to encode temporal relations. When learning a new language learners are often faced with the challenging task of discovering a new system of temporal relations. The present study investigates the development of tense and aspect marking in the interlanguage of L3 Italian learners enrolled in university language courses. It examines how the tense aspect system develops in the interlanguage and how the acquisition process is shaped by factors such as the lexical aspectual value of the predicates and discourse grounding. The data indicate that both lexical aspect and discourse grounding influence the distribution of verbal morphology in the interlanguage. Semantically congruent pairings of lexical aspect verbal morphology and discourse grounding are used more frequently and appropriately than less prototypical combinations. The acquisition process is also influenced by the learner's L1 which was mostly German in the context of the present study. The study can be used as a guide for curricular decisions in language teaching and for projecting further research on the development of tense aspect marking in multilingual learners.      Tense Systems in European Languages II Rolf Thieroff, 2011-05-03
