Storytimes for Children Stephanie G. Bauman, 2010-11-10 This text presents a compilation of the best of ideas from a group of library science graduate students providing creative and engaging programs geared especially for children ages 0-12. What are the concepts, activities, and topics that will hold the attention of today's children? And what are the best ways to provide a valuable learning experience while they're having fun and being entertained? Many of the most original, creative, and wildly effective ideas in storytime are contained in Storytimes for Children, a collection of fresh and vibrant programs created to be relevant, interesting, and fun for today's youngest generations. This collection of themed storytimes includes suggestions for opening and closing sessions, crafts, and activities, songs, poems, fingerplays, and movements, as well as the accompanying literature. Several of the included storytimes comprise a series of programs allowing for related activities that build upon each other. The text is organized into six chapters, each prefaced by an introduction that clarifies the strengths of the programs within. Each chapter covers a highly targeted age range to give practitioners the ability to easily choose the most appropriate storytimes for any given audience. Ohio Children's Book Review, 1995

Literature & the Learner Frances S. Goforth, 1998 As a genre text, not an anthology, this text teaches students about literature forms and discusses ways of using literature in the classroom. It is used to give students the background they need to evaluate, select, and use children's literature in their own teaching. A database of current literature is provided with the text and will be updated annually. The Publishers Weekly, 2003

Hospital, 1991-08-01 In Isobars Janette Turner Hospital presents fifteen stories of lives precariously balanced between the past and the present between the real and the imagined between the steamy tropical rain forests and beaches of Australia and the urban landscapes of North American cities The title story is a kind of cubist meditation on violence against women refracted through years of fragmented memories into a stunning locus of dread Indeed each of the stories is in its own way a fugue on the evanescence of time and distance In The Second Coming of Come by Chance the apocalyptic resurfacing of a submerged city during a drought prompts the reemergence of an old woman's memory of her rape as a fledgling schoolteacher some forty years earlier Throughout these stories the real and imaginary collide again and again under the pressures of passion loneliness and grief In The Loss of Faith a middle aged professor sees his first wife on a New York subway the day she dies in Australia In A Little Night Music a young woman's brief sexual encounter with a stranger on an airplane turns out to be a drug induced fantasy perhaps As the consciousness of her characters clickers between Queensland and Ontario Sydney and Manhattan Hospital skillfully blurs the lines between the quotidian and mythic between the real and surreal At the haunting conclusion of Uncle Seaborn a man returning to Australia after the death of his parents finds himself drawn by a talisman coin and an almost atavistic longing to a mysterious rendezvous in the sea And in the chilling piece Queen on Pentacles Nine of Swords the Tarot is the means by which a fortune teller's life becomes entangled with that of a brilliantly doomed Indian woman Yet even the most somber stories pulls back at the edge of despair and there are moments of dazzling illumination tenderness and transcendence In I Saw Three Ships an alcoholic veteran haunted by a friend's death in World War II seeks redemption through a visitation by a young woman he meets on the beach and comes close to self forgiveness in a final heart wrenching tableau of misunderstanding Profound compassionate powerful these stories explore the outermost boundaries of emotion Isobars reaffirms Janette Turner Hospital's status as one of the preeminent writers of contemporary fiction
