Terrain Seed Scarcity:

Terrain Seed Scarcity Peter Larkin, 2000-08-01 A collection of 10 years work in part lineated or syllabic but mostly in clustered prose which investigates ontological echoes of the environmental condition of new scarcity amid a wealth of inroads This poetry also negotiates kernels of desire and rarity where what is diminished risks itself in a damaged aversion to absence the hoped for terrain is where its own scarcity on the ground can set seed Anthropocene Poetics David Farrier, 2019-02-19 How poetry can help us think about and live in the Anthropocene by reframing our intimate relationship with geological time The Anthropocene describes how humanity has radically intruded into deep time the vast timescales that shape the Earth system and all life forms that it supports The challenge it poses how to live in our present moment alongside deep pasts and futures brings into sharp focus the importance of grasping the nature of our intimate relationship with geological time In Anthropocene Poetics David Farrier shows how contemporary poetry by Elizabeth Bishop Seamus Heaney Evelyn Reilly and Christian B k among others provides us with frameworks for thinking about this uncanny sense of time Looking at a diverse array of lyric and avant garde poetry from three interrelated perspectives the Anthropocene and the material turn in environmental philosophy the Plantationocene and the role of global capitalism in environmental crisis and the emergence of multispecies ethics and extinction studies Farrier rethinks the environmental humanities from a literary critical perspective Anthropocene Poetics puts a concern with deep time at the center defining a new poetics for thinking through humanity s role as geological agents the devastation caused by resource extraction and the looming extinction crisis

Oberhauser, Kelly R. Nail, Sonia Altizer, 2015-11-16

Monarch butterflies are among the most popular insect species in the world and are an icon for conservation groups and environmental education programs. Monarch caterpillars and adults are easily recognizable as welcome visitors to gardens in North America and beyond, and their spectacular migration in eastern North America from breeding locations in Canada and the United States to overwintering sites in Mexico has captured the imagination of the public. Monarch migration behavior and chemical ecology have been studied for decades. Yet many aspects of monarch biology have come to light in only the past few years. These aspects include questions regarding large scale trends in monarch population sizes, monarch interactions with pathogens and insect predators, and monarch molecular genetics and large scale evolution. A growing number of current research findings build on the observations of citizen scientists who monitor monarch migration, reproduction, survival, and disease. Monarchs face new threats from humans as they navigate a changing landscape marked by deforestation, pesticides, genetically modified crops, and a changing climate, all of which place the future of monarchs and their amazing migration in peril. To meet the demand for a timely synthesis of monarch biology, conservation, and outreach, Monarchs in a Changing World summarizes recent developments in scientific research, highlights challenges and responses to threats to monarch conservation, and showcases the many ways that monarchs are used in citizen science programs, outreach, and education. It examines issues pertaining to the eastern and western North American migratory populations, as well as to monarchs in South America, the Pacific and Caribbean Islands, and Europe. The target audience includes entomologists, population biologists, conservation policymakers, and K-12 teachers.

Seed world, 1919 Student Teaching in Agriculture Benton Elwood Barringer, 1925 Where Our Food Comes From Gary Paul Nabhan, 2012-02-13
 The future of our food depends on tiny seeds in orchards and fields the world over. In 1943, one of the first to recognize this fact, the great botanist Nikolay Vavilov, lay dying of starvation in a Soviet prison. But in the years before Stalin jailed him as a scapegoat for the country's famines, Vavilov had traveled over five continents, collecting hundreds of thousands of seeds in an effort to outline the ancient centers of agricultural diversity and guard against widespread hunger. Now another remarkable scientist and vivid storyteller has retraced his footsteps. In Where Our Food Comes From, Gary Paul Nabhan weaves together Vavilov's extraordinary story with his own expeditions to Earth's richest agricultural landscapes and the cultures that tend them. Retracing Vavilov's path from Mexico and the Colombian Amazon to the glaciers of the Pamirs in Tajikistan, he draws a vibrant portrait of changes that have occurred since Vavilov's time and why they matter.
