Streamlined Life Cycle Assessment:

Development of Metrics for Streamlined Life Cycle Assessments Maria de Lourdes Alcaraz Ochoa, 2016 Growing concern about climate change and human impact on the environment have resulted in an increase in interest for evaluating the environmental impact of products and services we consume Life cycle assessment LCA has become the most prominent method for environmental evaluation Life cycle assessment is the quantification of the environmental impacts of a product or service through its whole life cycle from the extraction of materials to manufacturing and end of life A carbon footprint is a subset of an LCA LCAs are required as part of government regulations used by companies to identify high resource use in their supply chain or to choose between product designs and by consumers to choose between alternative product choices LCAs provide valuable information however they are resource intensive time consuming and uncertain Therefore a methodology that addresses all these issues is needed This study addresses the following question Can LCAs be streamlined while still providing useful information To answer this an under specification probabilistic screening methodology is employed The screening methodology uses a high level assessment of the footprint incorporates uncertainty in the inputs and refines data around the primary drivers of impact The streamlined LCA procedure is extended to include a Sobol based sensitivity analysis methodology for identifying high impact activities The effects of partial perfect information in subsequent data acquisition activities on the streamlining methodology are examined Metrics to determine sufficiency in the data gathering procedure and to determine whether decision makers can sufficiently distinguish between two products or design alternatives are developed A procedure to quantify the cost of additional information is developed Finally an exploration of the scenario space of the impacts is analyzed The extended streamlined methodology is applied to a case study on tablets with a focus on integrated circuits This thesis finds that the streamlined probabilistic methodology can be used to cost effectively evaluate the environmental impact of products while still taking uncertainty into account Metrics to determine sufficiency can be effectively used and the presence of partial information does not limit the usefulness of the metrics Furthermore quantifying the cost of additional information can help determine sufficiency in data collection efforts and can help understand the challenges that companies face when performing an LCA

Life Cycle Assessment Ralph Horne, Tim Grant, Karli Verghese, 2009 Life Cycle Assessment LCA has developed in Australia over the past 16 years in a fragmented way with many different people and organizations contributing to the area at different times and largely through informal or unpublished work This publication will legitimize and document LCA research and methodology development to act as a record of what has happened and a basis for future development and application of the tool The Centre for Design at RMIT has been a leading research center in Australia through its work on data collection methodology development and contribution to knowledge through undertaking LCA studies for leading companies and government departments ranging from products packaging buildings water management and waste management This work in addition to key work undertaken by other researchers will be presented The book will become a bridge between LCA implementation and life cycle management LCM and provide discussion on how LCA development will be in the future and how it integrates with available software tools

Life Cycle Assessment in the Built Environment Robert Crawford, 2011-03-10 Life cycle assessment enables the identification of a broad range of potential environmental impacts occurring across the entire life of a product from its design through to its eventual disposal or reuse The need for life cycle assessment to inform environmental design within the built environment is critical due to the complex range of materials and processes required to construct and manage our buildings and infrastructure systems After outlining the framework for life cycle assessment this book uses a range of case studies to demonstrate the innovative input output based hybrid approach for compiling a life cycle inventory This approach enables a comprehensive analysis of a broad range of resource requirements and environmental outputs so that the potential environmental impacts of a building or infrastructure system can be ascertained These case studies cover a range of elements that are part of the built environment including a residential building a commercial office building and a wind turbine as well as individual building components such as a residential scale photovoltaic system Comprehensively introducing and demonstrating the uses and benefits of life cycle assessment for built environment projects this book will show you how to assess the environmental performance of your clients projects to compare design options across their entire life and to identify opportunities for improving environmental performance
