Terrorist Threats to Food, 2002 Terrorist Threats to Food World Health Organization. Food Safety Department, 2002

While only a few cases of intentional contamination of food have been proven the risk of possible terrorist threats to food should be given serious consideration by public health authorities and the food industry This document examines means of establishing basic prevention surveillance and response capacities Because both unintentionally and deliberately caused outbreaks of foodborne disease may be managed by many of the same mechanisms the WHO recommendations concentrate on working with national governments on integrating terrorism prevention and response measures into existing national food safety and disease surveillance programmes Preventive measures by governments and the food industry are discussed Industry involvement is encouraged from the outset as the food industry possesses the primary means and greatest ability to minimize food related risks Existing food safety management programmes can be enhanced WHO says while putting in place appropriate security measures to protect food production and distribution systems The document provides suggestions for specific measures for consideration by industry The document provides guidance on strengthening existing communicable disease control systems to ensure that surveillance systems are sufficiently sensitive to meet the threat of any food safety emergency The guidance document emphasizes the need to strengthen existing emergency alert and response systems by improving links with all relevant agencies and with the food industry Many developed and most developing countries are not yet adequately prepared to deal with a large scale food safety emergency All countries should undertake preparedness and response planning to be able to cope with food safety emergencies regardless of their cause In this regard the services of various technical programmes of WHO as well as other organizations that may be of assistance to countries in addressing this newly emerging public health concern are also described in the document Experts from national agencies in Australia Germany Ireland Japan Russia Spain United Kingdom and United States of America and from organizations including the European Commission the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the Industry Council for Development contributed to the development of the document Terrorist Threats to Food, 2002 Building Effective Food Safety Systems Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2005 With multilingual CD ROM attached inside back cover Traceability in the Food Supply Chain Daniel R. Levinson, 2010-10 Beginning in 2005 the FDA required certain food facilities to maintain records identifying the sources recipients and transporters of food products This will allow the FDA to trace an article of food through each stage of the food supply chain from a retail shelf back to a farm if FDA has a reasonable belief that a food product presents a serious health threat Traceability is the ability to follow the movement of a food product through the stages of production processing and distribution This study is based on two primary data sources 1 a traceability exercise of 40 selected food products and 2 structured interviews with the managers at the food facilities that handled the selected food products Illustrations Food Safety, Risk Intelligence and Benchmarking Sylvain

Charlebois,2017-01-30 This book comprehensively argues for more future benchmarking between nations Since the initial food safety benchmarking report was published in 2008 the sharing of data and protocols among nations has dramatically increased It was intended to identify and evaluate common elements among global food safety systems More specifically benchmarking identifies those countries that employ comparatively best practices to assess manage and communicate the risks related to the safety of food and their respective food systems The overarching intent of this benchmarking assessment however is to stimulate exchange and discussion on food safety performance among nations Medical Aspects of
