Jacobs,2017-10-24 The diverse composition of American families and changing ways of raising our children have become subjects of intense scrutiny by researchers and policymakers in recent years Shifting demographics and work patterns growing numbers of women in the work force teenage pregnancy single parent families and the deinstitutionalization of the elderly disabled and mentally ill all these trends have significantly affected family life Evaluating

Family Programs effectively bridges the gap between researchers and practitioners in order to bring practical understandable advice to providers of family programs and to program funders and policymakers Heather B Weiss and Francine H Jacobs have collected in this volume works which move outside the traditional approaches of their disciplines to create new models for delivering and evaluating services This sets a mood of genuine inquiry and excitement about successful aspects of programs while maintaining openness about the limitations of both research and practice By expanding the research model this work is an attempt to understand reciprocal influences of extended family culture community and social institutions It urges those who advocate program accountability to understand that not all types of evaluations are appropriate for all programs and it notes that limitations in current evaluation technologies make it difficult to evaluate outcomes Evaluating Family Programs reminds the reader that in order to develop sound family policy we must look at children and families in context Because policymakers program administrators and informed citizens have come to rely more upon the results of evaluation research we must improve our methods while not losing sight of its limitations It is a thought provoking contribution to the efforts of those who seek to support the American family with compassion understanding and realism Guide for the Development and Management of Test Collections Association of College and Research Libraries.

Magrab,2012-12-06 Over the last several decades the remarkable success of science and medical technology has allowed many children with chronic illness and handicapping conditions to live longer and healthier lives But this success is not without toll The human cost of chronic illness or a handicapping condition can be enormous for the child and the family For the family there is often the stressful daily burden of care fatigue marital stress low family morale financial burdens and reduced career mobility For the child there are often arduous and painful treatment regimes frequent school absences low energy periods and uncertainties with respect to future education and vocation The course of many diseases is unpredictable and the very fact of chronicity implies ongoing coping problems for the family and the child The impact of a chronic illness or handicapping condition on a family system is usually more disintegrative than integrative disrupting the lives of all family members and exacerbating the developmental risks to the child It is not surprising that a recent comprehensive study for establishing public policies for children with chronic illness at Vanderbilt University has called attention to these factors and produced as a primary recommendation increased attention to the psychological impact of disease on the family and the child In this context there is an important need for adequate assessment of psychological and behavioral problems in these children to plan for appropriate services
